INTRODUCTION

One of the principal difficulties in the way of the student of Ceylon affairs is the lack of reference works of facts and figures regarding the Island and its various parts in a form suitable for desk or library and convenient for carrying about. The present series is intended to meet that need to some extent.

This volume on Race and Religion, it is hoped, would prove useful in providing satisfactory data for an understanding of the general situation respecting two subjects of more than ordinary interest. Its scope may be judged from the table of contents elsewhere.

The general design is to show at a glance the number of persons of the principal races and religions in the Island or in any province, district or division of a district, as well as in the towns and larger villages. The figures help also to show the relation of the various race-groups to their traditional faiths. The constituency of the Christian community, drawn from the various races, is also shown in analysis. A brief introductory note precedes each section.

The statistics in this volume are from the Census returns of 1911. The following table showing the increase per cent. for the decade ending with that year may serve to help in forming an estimate of the probable increase in the population since that time.
