10. Read the following passage and answer the questions below.

In the past, many educated people regarded traditional medicine as superstition. It was considered that it had no basis in modern medical science. Herbal medicines were thought to be either useless, or even harmful. Practitioners of traditional medicine were called quacks of charlatans, and western trained doctors usually saw them as a possible threat to the well being of their patients.

The situation is gradually changing. While it is recognized that there are quacks among traditional medicine, it is now being increasingly accepted that traditional medicine has an important role to play in modern society. Modern research into traditional methods has shown that they can sometimes achieve amazing results. For example, traditional medicine has been extraordinarily successful in curing certain types of rheumatic conditions and skin diseases much more effectively than western medicine.

(a) How was traditional medicine considered in the past?

.....

(b) What is the state of traditional medicine now?

.....

(c) Who thought that traditional medicine was a threat to patients?

1. Read the passage given.

Sports and games play an important role in character building. When we play games we play hard to win the game as a team. Playing the game for personal glory will break up the unity and the spirit of the team. "We cannot always win", is the another truth we learn from sports and games. This teaches us to accept defeat and victory in the same spirit. To develop this spirit one needs o t h e r qualities such as patience, courage and a sense of responsibility which prepare us to live as a good citizen.

Sports and games help us to live with understanding with our fellow men. Participation in the international sports festivals helps us to promote understanding among participants from various countries. This is one of the objectives of modern Olympic games. They provide a wonderful opportunity for bringing nations of the world together every four years.
