THE VETERINARIANS OATH

" Being admitted to the profession of Veterinary medicine, I solemnly dedicate my self and the knowledge I possess to the benefit of the society, to the conservation of our livestock resources and to the relief of suffering of animals. I will practice my profession consciously with dignity. The health of my patients, the best interest of their owners and the welfare of fellow men will be my primary considerations. I will, at all times, be humane and temper pain with anesthesia where indicated. I will not use my knowledge contrary to the laws of humanity, nor in contravention to the ethical code of my profession. I will uphold and strive to advance honour and noble traditions of the veterinary profession. These pledges I make freely in the eyes of god and upon my honor. "

MESSAGE FROM
THE DEAN OF THE FACULTY OF VETERINARY MEDICINE AND ANIMAL SCIENCE

A year has passed - since we bade goodbye to a batch of students - and its time for another Going down!! This clearly indicates that our small, dynamic and efficient Faculty of Veterinary Medicine and Animal Sciences, is doing its job of training future veterinarians for our country, the region and world, in a very diligent and effective manner and very importantly, on schedule, amidst declining budgets and diminishing resources. However, while the entire staff of our faculty wish the outgoing students the very best for their future careers, I do state emphatically that we have done our best for you all, without compromising the highest standards of our professions and in educating you all. We assure you that.

The veterinary services today are not restricted to treating animals. The vocation has branched out into greater fields, which include animal management for better health, safety of food of animal origins, drug residues and even some aspects of supporting the aquaculture industry. The students of our Faculty today are thus exposed to a wider arena of subjects, and this is strength of our degree, to train our youth entering the portals of our faculty in a diversified range of subjects, enabling them to tackle all problems of the animal sector with competence and confidence. Thus, I request you all to face the challenges of the future - and become good veterinarians to serve our nation and the world beyond.

Looking back over the years, we the staff feel nostalgic - that another batch of our students are leaving us to seek their vocation and niche in life, as veterinarians. You will end up in a diverse arena of fields within the animal sector, and hopefully become very successful in your respective careers. While wishing you the very best in this endeavor, I also request you to maintain links with us at the Faculty and the University as a whole. The University and the Faculty has given you a very special environment that no other Sri Lankan University can provide - and as alumni of this Faculty and University, you have the bounden duty to help us in return to maintain and possibly improve our programs - to train even better veterinarians in the future. We at the faculty encourage this contact as it is always pleasing to meet our graduates and see and learn of their developments both professionally and personally. Please do remember that we will also help you and hence when called upon, please do help us too.

As you leave our hallowed precincts, we at the Faculty of Veterinary Medicine and Animal Sciences wish you the very best that life has to offer you both professionally and personally. As the Head of the Faculty I too wish you all personally - all the success and do request you to maintain links with the Faculty - as people may leave or change positions; but the Faculty, one only one of its kind in Sri Lanka must go on from strength to strength to serve the veterinary and animal industry of our nation and the world.

MESSAGE FROM THE SENIOR TREASURER

It is indeed a great pleasure to send this message of best wishes on the occasion of "Going Down-Batch 2004/2005". "Going Down" is the most glamorous event of the faculty calender, where both senior and junior students equally enjoy, together with their teachers and well-wishers. This grand event organized by the junior students to bid farewell to their seniors. I have witnessed the hard work they have to perform in order to make this event a success. All this is done to appreciate the friendship they have shown during their stay in the faculty. I take this opportunity to request senior students remaining in the faculty to show a similar, true friendship to the new entrants to the faculty during their admission time, which is the most vulnerable period for "ragging".

While congratulating the graduating batch, I hope that they will utilize their knowledge and skills developed during last four years for the benefit of the society. As an educated youth, you are an asset to the country. You are expected to be an active partner in the development process and give leadership to the society. You are now entering to the well recognized and honoured "Veterinary Profession" in this country and there are endless opportunities ahead of you. Although you are leaving the faculty your teachers and senior colleagues will be with you through out your carrier. We as teachers are always like to see your success.

I would like to congratulate the students of batch 2006/2007 on their success in organizing this event, a task which requires commitment and hard work. My special appreciation goes to our sponsors who had always behind us to make this event a success.

A happy and memorable evening for everybody present here today.

MESSAGE FROM THE HEAD/ DEPARTMENT OF BASIC VETERINARY SCIENCES

It is with great pleasure I am sending this message of good wishes to the final year students of the batch 2004/ 2005 on the occasion of "Going Down" which marks the end of their undergraduate life and the beginning of their challenging noble veterinary professional career.

Although the veterinary graduates were not recruited by the government sector annually during the past decade, all veterinary graduates were able to secure employment soon after completing their final examination. In this respect, the most commonest mode of employment of the veterinarians happen to be setting up of their own individual private clinics which were regrettably unable to ensure the well-being of the patients and measure up to the expectations of the clients in the twenty first century. Further, most of the young veterinarians have totally neglected their duty to serve in much needed countries sectors such as poultry, dairy, animal feed industry etc in their way to find easy pathways of income contradicting what they said during their undergraduate life to the junior colleagues and to the public. However, easy pathways of employments are saturating, therefore the challenge a head of new graduates is to embark on novel avenues of employments which need high dedication, entrepreneurial skills, team work etc in addition to be competent in knowledge and skill related to the veterinary profession. In this respect, I am sure that comprehensive academic programme and related activities of the faculty have laid a solid foundation required for you to face these challenges of the twenty-first century and to fulfill your obligation to the society as conscious professionals. I, together with the staff of the Department, wish all the best in your endeavors in succeeding in these new horizons (or emerging avenues of employment)

The organizing a colorful annual event like "Going Down" is a challenge. Toeing the line of tradition, the third year students of the batch 2006/2007 is shouldering this mammoth task this year on behalf of the students and the staff of the Faculty. As I stated in the previous years, this is a good opportunity for the students to rethink of strengthening the good traditions like "Going Down" while abandoning the dreadful traditions such as "Ragging" which destroy the affinity among students and staff and bring disrepute to the Faculty and the University. Finally I thank the 3rd year students for organizing this event and the well-wishers for their generous contributions without which this event would not have been a reality.

MESSAGE FROM THE HEAD,
DEPARTMENT OF VETERINARY PATHOBIOLOGY

It is with great pleasure that I send this message of congratulations and good wishes to the graduating batch of 2004/2005 veterinary students on the occasion of their "Going Down".

Our faculty has a long history nurtured with rich traditions going back to many decades. "Going Down" is the most exciting and colourful event in the faculty calendar. It signifies the successful completion of undergraduate studies by the vet students. On this memorable day, all students and staff members of the faculty get together and bid farewell to the graduating students who are eagerly awaiting to step into the society as qualified veterinarians.

Today our veterinarians are called upon to play a major role in the development of our motherland. Their services are extensively sought after in many private and public sectors such as companion animal healthcare, livestock industry including poultry and aquaculture sectors and wild animal conservation. As true members of the noble profession of Veterinary Medicine, they have to ensure health, welfare and happiness of the animals that are brought to their notice and care. In addition, our veterinarians have to take the leadership in various development projects aimed at uplifting the living standards of the people through the improvement of animal health, production and conservation. I am sure that the knowledge, skills and attitudes that they have acquired during the undergraduate days will immensely help them to fulfil these obligations.

Organizing a farewell celebration of this scale is by no means an easy task. The effort taken by this year Going-Down Organising Committee and the students of the 2006/2007 batch to make this event a success is praiseworthy. I take this opportunity on behalf of all staff members of the Department of Veterinary Pathobiology, to wish the graduating vet students every success in their future endeavours and an enjoyable evening that you would cherish for many years to come.

It is with great pleasure that I send this message to the souvenir published on the occasion of the "Going Down" in the year 2010.

This indeed signifies facing a challenging future, shouldering responsibilities and a beginning of a new experience to those who are leaving the university. On behalf of the Department of Veterinary Public Health & Pharmacology, I take this opportunity to wish the graduating batch 2004/2005 very best in their future endeavours and hope that they would make a significant contribution to the development of Sri Lanka livestock sector.

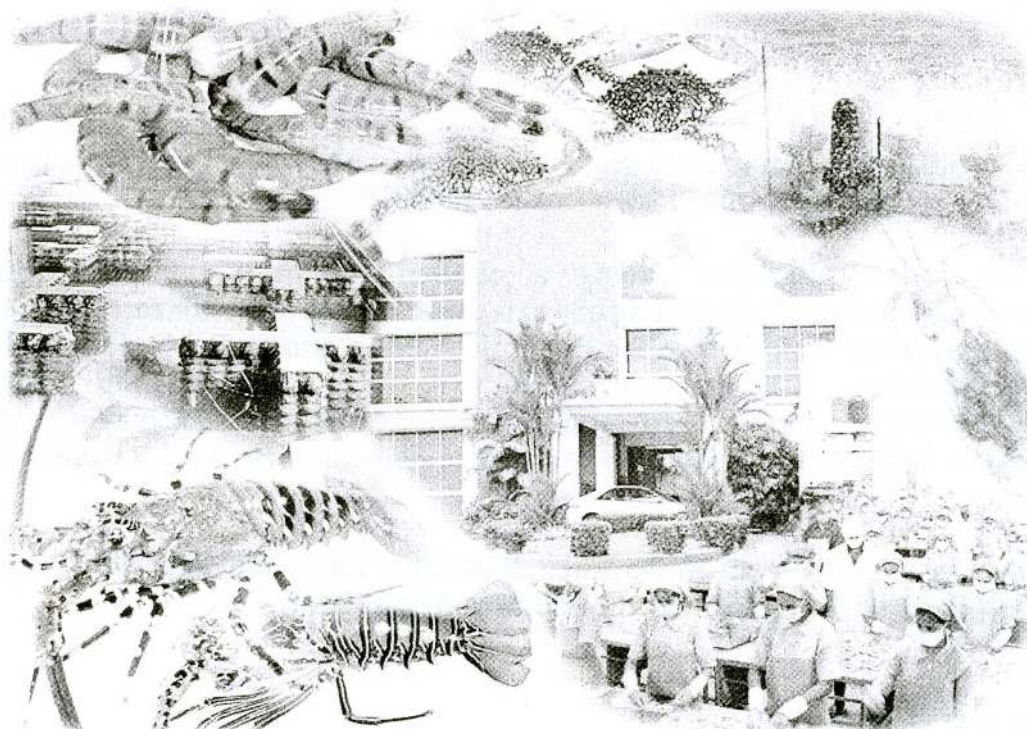

My wishes also go out to the batch 2006/2007 for organizing the "Going Down" social in keeping with the traditions of our Faculty.

"Happiness is beneficial for the body, but it is grief that develops the powers of the mind"

MESSAGE FROM THE COORDINATOR OF THE ENGLISH LANGUAGE TEACHING UNIT (ELTU)

"The turning point in the process of growing up," according to Max Lerner, "is when you discover the core of strength within you that survives all hurt." Sound true to life though this may, it seems to me to be rather limited and self-centered. What is in fact 'the [real] core of strength ...' is that which eases the 'hurt' of all living beings. Realizing that you, the graduating batch of students, have had a priceless opportunity to acquire the [essential] core of strength required of veterinarians within the four years in the faculty makes me extremely delighted. How much of that strength have you acquired and to what extent would you use that strength to ease the suffering of the animals which are to be under your care and that of those who own them are two important questions you need to ask yourselves at this crucial juncture of your life, especially on the occasion of your 'Going Down Batch 2004/2005', the grand finale of the four years you spent in the faculty. Sending this message on this grand occasion does indeed give me great pleasure.

Formal university education in a faculty of Applied Science as that of Veterinary Medicine and Animal Science (FVMAS) is geared to provide the students with a wide spectrum of knowledge, experience and skills that will enable the prospective graduates to not only perform the tasks expected of them by their respective profession, but also find ways and means of addressing, if not solving, real life problems. The skills mentioned above include interpersonal skills that will facilitate effective dissemination of information in English, the most important medium of communication in the academic, professional communities you all aspire to enter. I am sure that during this period of four years, you, besides your numerous accomplishments (academic and 'others'), would undoubtedly have acquired higher competence in English that will help you take part in the activities of these communities on terms of equality.

On behalf of the staff, ELTU, FVMAS, I would like to congratulate you on your success in almost completing the course, except the final BVSc examination after which I know you will all go forward to serve in the diverse fields of Veterinary Medicine in our country, making a meaningful contribution to the development of these fields.

I would also like to congratulate the students of batch 2006/2007 on their success in organizing this grand event. It is with great pride that I note that they belong to the first batch of students whom I taught from the first year in the faculty. Organizing this event of massive proportions despite their heavy academic schedule and their various other commitments amply demonstrate their sheer determination, teamwork and dedication.

Finally, on behalf of the staff, ELTU, FVMAS, I wish the students of batch 2004/2005 every success in all their endeavors and all those who are present on this occasion today a pleasant and memorable evening.

MESSAGE FROM THE GOING DOWN COMMITTEE BATCH 2006/2007

The Going Down is one of the most memorable and colourful events in our faculty calendar. Organizing such a grand event affords great pleasure one could never experience in his/her entire life. This time the Going down organizing committee of the batch 2006/2007 experienced that joy of organizing this remarkable function.

Though our super seniors, students from batch 2004/2005, are about to leave this beautiful place in our mother land, the memories we share with them will always linger in our minds. Such an unbreakable bond has been established between them and us during the past few years.

The " Going Down – Batch 2004/2005 " is actually a remarkable outcome of the untiring efforts of a bunch of hard working team of students with high sense of dedication and commitment. We are proud to dedicate this year's going down to our super seniors as a token of appreciation for all what they did to make our stay in the faculty pleasant from the time we entered university.

While wishing our super seniors a bright future with full of success in all their endeavours, we would like to thank all who, despite their various commitments, joined hands with us to organize this majestic function. Without their strength and support, we would not have been able to organize this function.

Dear super seniors do remember that this occasion does not mark the end of an era, but marks the beginning of another!

Somatic cell nuclear transfer (cloning) and its applications

Basil Alexander, PhD (Guelph, Canada)

Senior Lecturer, Department of Farm Animal Production and Health, Faculty of Veterinary Medicine and Animal Science, University of Peradeniya

A new era in reproductive biotechnology began when Wilmut and colleagues produced the first somatic cell nuclear transfer (SCNT) derived viable sheep, “Dolly”, from transplanting an adult somatic cell into an enucleated sheep oocyte. Following this breakthrough, theoretically, it seems to be a promising technology to produce unlimited numbers of genetic copies from an adult animal or a fetus; and so far many species including farm, pet and endangered animals have been cloned using this technology. Obtaining a viable offspring through this technology still imposes a great challenge for researchers due to its relatively low success rate and in some instances compromised health status of offspring. At present, cloning is carried out for biomedical and research purposes, and agriculture production. Although extensive reviews are available on animal cloning, here we emphasize some recent findings that are important in farm animal, endangered and pet animal cloning.

The standard SCNT technique in animals in most of the laboratories follows some common steps such as oocyte maturation, removal of cumulus cells from oocytes, enucleation, transplantation of the somatic cell into the perivitelline space of the oocyte, electro-fusion of the cell couplet, activation of the embryo and in vitro embryo culture. When the embryos develop to blastocyst, they are transplanted into the uteri of estrus-synchronized surrogate animals 6-7 day post estrus. In most cases, the oocytes are collected from abattoir ovaries using the slicing method and undergo IVM for 17h (goat and sheep).

Some laboratories that conduct goat or dog SCNT programs preferred in vivo derived oocytes either following ovulation or laparoscopic ovum pick up. Following maturation, the cumulus cells are removed from the oocytes by vortexing in 3% Sodium citrate medium for 1-2 minute or in 0.01% hyaluronidase. Cumulus-free oocytes with first polar body extrusion are selected and after a short exposure to cytochalasin B and Hoechst stain, enucleation is carried out in a micromanipulator equipped with UV light. Following oocyte enucleation, cell cycle-synchronized donor cells are transplanted into the perivitelline space of the oocytes in a manner that both cell membranes attach firmly to each other. The cell-couplets are then electrofused in a 0.3 M mannitol fusion medium. One hour following fusion, cell-couplets are activated by culturing for 5 min in ionomycin containing medium followed by culturing them in 6-DMAP or cycloheximide containing medium. After activation, embryos are cultured in IVC medium and are surgically transferred into uteri of estrus-synchronized recipients or into the oviducts of the recipients.

Cloning can be carried out for different purposes such as : 1) Reproductive cloning, 2) Cloning for transgenesis, and 3) cloning for therapeutic purposes.

1. Reproductive cloning

Cloning of individuals or making of copies of an individual can be considered as Reproductive cloning. This cloning technique is used to produce many copies of farm animals with high genetic merits (Figure 1), production of copies of pets (Figure 2), endangered animal conservation (Figure 3) and human cloning (Figure 4). For ethical reasons human cloning is not carried out by scientists in the world.

Many applications in reproductive cloning

2. Cloning for transgenesis

This type of cloning is carried out to produce animals to carry a foreign gene. An animal which carry a transgene (a foreign gene inserted into a cell) is called a transgenic animal. Transgenic animals produce a specific protein in milk which is a product of the transgene. Cloned transgenic cows (Figure 5) produce human

3. Therapeutic cloning

This cloning is aimed at finding new treatments for different diseases such as spinal cord injury, nerve degenerating diseases, diabetes and for animal-human organ transplantation (xenotransplantation). A somatic tissue biopsy is taken from a patient and an embryo is produced using somatic cell nuclear transfer technique. Embryonic stem cells are obtained from this embryo and are injected into the damaged site of the same patient. These stem cells have the ability (totipotency) to differentiate into required cell type of the body that will heal the lesion.

A National Independent Laboratory to Ensure Safety of Animal Products

Quality Control of Food Commodities of animal origin is important to promote national and international trade. Certification of food commodities as free of antimicrobial residues is a contributory effort in controlling quality of food. The high demand for laboratory set up for antimicrobial residue monitoring was proposed by quality conscious food industry and competent authorities. Raving recognized this need a laboratory was set-up for monitoring antimicrobial residues in order to meet the national demand.

There is an increased global demand for producing animal proteins as protein source in food. To fulfill this consumer demand, today's food industry used many intensive method of animal rearing. Under these circumstances producers may inclined to use antimicrobial agents during different stage of animal production which needs to rationalize.

Based on recommended practices antimicrobials are allowed to use only for treatment. After the clinical recovery of the animal, withholding period is allowed to eliminate the drug from the body, before an animal is slaughtered, in order to process for human consumption. Where it fails to obtain proper veterinary advice animal producers may misuse these drugs, which may end up as some residues at the time of harvesting.

Antimicrobial residues in food commodities are not acceptable since it may lead to some adverse effects on the consumer, causing health hazards. The direct effects of human health course can be allergy. However, antimicrobials that can have direct toxic effects are prohibited to use in animal production. Indirect effect is promoting antimicrobial resistant bacteria which results the antibiotics become ineffective in future treatment programmes of animals or human. Veterinarians treat animals and advice farmers in such a manner there should not be any left over chemicals (residues) in the animal's body at the time of slaughter.

Routine residue testing is therefore a necessity to ensure the quality of the product in addition to the GVP adopted at the farm level. Antimicrobial residue monitoring programmes of food commodities are well established in developing countries where they maintain high standards for their food products. Such residue monitoring facilities are now commenced at the Faculty of Veterinary Medicine & animal Science, University offeradeniya.

For different antimicrobials, different techniques/tests had to be established with different degree of sensitivity. The simplest test which can apply to any commodity (i.e. milk, meat, eggs, fish, and shrimp) is a bioassay method which is names as Six Plate Test (SPT). Six different types of antimicrobial agents including penicillin, tetracycline, sulphonamides, streptomycin, quinolones and erythromycin can be screened using six plate test.

However, testing the final food product will allow only accepting or condemning the commodity. If accepted, it will be a value added product, since it will get a quality certification.

Since chloramphenicol and nitrofurans are banned substances, which are illegal to use in animal production, screening tests have now developed to monitor any violations. Accordingly, facilities are now available to screen selected food commodities for chloramphenicol using ELISA system. The export consignments of cultured fish or shrimp samples are screened for nitrofurans metabolites using HPLC system. Further, in support to the regulatory work of the Department of Animal Production & Health and the Ministry of Fisheries and Aquatic Resources, random feed samples are checked for nitrofurans including furazolidone, as the parent compound.

Currently the Food Safety & Quality Assurance Laboratory of the Department of Veterinary Public Health & Pharmacology is being recommended for accreditation by the ISO 17025 standard by the Sri Lanka Accreditation Board.

The screening tests thus set up are used by the quality certified poultry processors and shrimp exporters in order to meet the standards. This method is also in use by Regulatory Authorities including the Ministry of Fisheries and the Quarantine Division of the Department of Animal Production and Health. The facility serves as the National Center for testing livestock, poultry and aquatic food commodities for antimicrobial residues which is an essential component in food quality assurance.

Health Benefits of Pure Milk Fat

Dr Anura Jayasooriya, BVSc, MSc, PhD

Senior Lecturer, Faculty of Veterinary Medicine and Animal Science

University of Peradeniya.

Email (anurap@pdn.ac.lk)

Cow milk is regarded as a nutritious food item that could be easily obtained by everyone. However, two major problems, namely lactose intolerance and milk allergy could arise owing to consumption of milk, caused by two major constituents of milk, lactose and proteins, respectively. Another major concern among the consumers is that the milk fat could have some adverse effects on our health. It is claimed that the milk fat contains a larger proportion of saturated fatty acids in its fatty acid profile and they could be harmful to our health.

However, the research shows that milk fat is one of the most valuable components in milk. Unfortunately, we have failed to realize the importance of its value. Research over the years has revealed the health benefits of pure milk fat. Now, it is well known among the scientific community that the milk fat contains some compounds with anti-carcinogenic properties. In addition, it has also been reported that the milk fat possesses other health promoting anti-atherogenic, anti-diabetic and immune enhancing properties.

According to the research findings, a group of fatty acids called Conjugated Linoleic Acid (CLA), positional and geometrical isomers of linoleic acid, are abundantly found in fat components of milk from ruminants. CLA are naturally synthesized only in ruminants. For the first time in 1987, a scientist from Wisconsin University, USA, named Michael Pariza, identified this special group of fatty acids with potential anticancer properties. Since then, a larger number of research has been done in the health benefits and other physiological functions of CLA. Anybody who is interested can browse through the website, <http://www.wisc.edu/fri/clarefs.htm>, and obtain the latest scientific information on CLA. This website is regularly updated with latest information on CLA obtained through research carried world wide.

In addition to the above mentioned health benefits, the anti-obesity action of CLA has attracted a great deal of attention of people all over the world because obesity and over weight have become global health hazards.

A study published by Dr. Michael Zemel of University of Tennessee, USA, in international scientific journal, Obesity Research, revealed that drinking milk while dieting may help double the amount of weight loss. The report further shows that a group of African Americans, who are more prone to diet induced obesity, lost more body fat due to drinking of more milk than drinking of less milk. Furthermore, comprehensive findings of another investigation on the association between dairy food consumption and weight change in perimenopausal women, published in American Journal of Clinical Nutrition, have shown that the low fat milk, and not the full fat milk consumption, leads to an increase in weight gain, which is an indicator of body fat accretion. Therefore, it is apparent that some active ingredients present in milk fat could prevent body fat accretion.

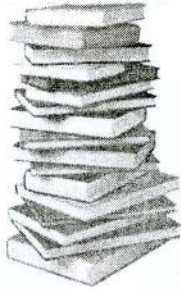

As a result of this, the authors of that research suggest that the CLA may have played a role in controlling the weight gain in women who consumed high fat milk compared to those who drank low fat milk. I was also involved in CLA research during my postgraduate studies at Miyazaki University, Japan using laboratory rats. The results clearly indicated that CLA in rat's diet could reduce the fat accretion in various locations in their bodies. Because of this proven body fat reduction effect, commercial CLA preparations have become popular nutraceutical not only in the international market, but also in our local market. What is surprising is that CLA is sold in capsules in Sri Lankan pharmacies at very high prices with a claim that it reduces fat. Most probably, these CLA may not be natural, but may have been chemically synthesized in laboratories. Truly speaking, we have the opportunity to obtain natural CLA through consumption of milk, especially the full cream, but not the skimmed milk.

In addition to CLA, milk fat is reported to contain a number of other bioactive compounds with anti-carcinogenic and anti-microbial actions. Those are Butyric acid, Vaccenic acid, Sphingomyelin and Vitamin A. Butyric acid is a short chain fatty acid, which is uniquely made in mammary tissues and rumen (one of the compartments of complex stomach of ruminants). Vaccenic acid is also a fatty acid, which is produced due to the biohydrogenation process of linoleic acid in rumen. It also plays a major role in the CLA synthesis in mammary tissues by acting as an intermediate molecule of CLA biosynthetic process. When we consider all these facts, it is apparent that milk fat possesses a number of active ingredients that have beneficial effects on our health.

MAJOR CONSTRAINTS AND POTENTIALS FOR THE DEVELOPMENT OF DAIRY INDUSTRY IN SRI LANKA

Back Ground

The dairy industry is important and tremendous potential in developing the economy in the country. Milk production has been a traditional industry that has survived thousands of years. Milk production is important not only because of the nutrition it provides but also due to the extensive employment opportunities the industry offers. Dairy production plays a vital role in maintaining sustainability and crop yields in most smallholder mixed farming systems and has provided them with a source of regular daily income and a way of cushioning the risk of frequent crop and marketing failures.

Constraints

Dairy industry in Sri Lanka has been stagnated over the past several decades due to a number of constraints that include biological, technical, socio-economic, lack of infrastructure facilities and political factors. The main biological factors are lack of quality breeding materials and genotype of the animals and its interaction with the environment which include the macro and micro climate, general management and disease prevalence. Technical constraints include the knowledge and skills of the farmers and availability and delivery of advisory and support services specially lack of veterinary service and infrastructure facilities. Socio-economic issues include attitudes and believes of farmers and consumers, farm gate price of milk and marketing channels. Political factors include lack of proper short term, mid term and long term policy planning and commitment to promote and support dairy industry in Sri Lanka.

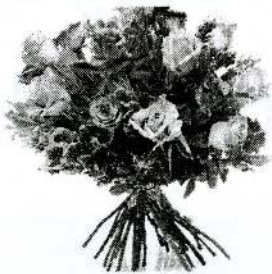

In spite of the fact that the Medical Research Institute recommends a per capita consumption level of 65 kg milk, per capita availability is only about 36 kg. Therefore Sri Lanka has the lowest milk consumption in South Asia at present. Powdered milk is more popular among consumers mainly due to the fact that it guarantees quality, convenience in handling and has the possibility of storage under room temperature for several weeks. Pricing systems prevailing in the country is biased towards satisfying the collectors and processors rather than the producers. Relatively high opportunity cost of labor relative to the farm gate price of milk discourages farmers from being involved with intensive dairy farming. A rough estimate of farm gate price of milk to labor wage ratio is 1:20 at present. As a result of that farmers are unwilling to spend much time and money on activities related to intensive dairy farming. Unhealthy competition among milk collectors at the grass root level has created another set of problems for the quality of milk collected and to the viability of running a collection programme. The lack of satisfactory milk testing facilities at village level milk collecting centers add further to deteriorating the situation. There is no responsible regulatory system in place to ensure the quality of milk collected and marketed in the country. Dairying is not the main source of income for most of the small holders and it provides only additional income for their day today activities.

I think that the above from the narration of the evolution of policies supporting the dairy industry in Sri Lanka and that could be the areas needed the attention of policy makers and implementing agencies. It is therefore heartening the present government has given high priority to dairy development. However, it is necessary for all concern to take hard and realistic look at 'what needs to be done and then do it.

On & Off Thoughts

The past we never forgo
Where there was beauty, freedom & love
the thoughts of a better tomorrow
And I see
Generations of young people traveling along the same path
Not knowing where the dream ends
To begin the reality....

The future we anticipate,
a mission, a vision.
The present we can hardly bear
A head full of controversial issues
All the things done by me have I done that
All the things that came in future
am I doing them
Who is me & what is me

Everyone trying to be what they are not
Identifying people over & over again
Trying to deal with an ultimatum without contemplation.
Making one wonder:
Is life worth living
Is there an escape
But there is always illusion
All are free to run after
May all beings live in peace.

Dear friends,
Here is a fair suggestion
Let's all cherish
the beauty & the value of nature as it is
Let's make ourselves the trustees of the world & conserve what we have here
for our own sons & daughters.
You, my beloved sisters & brothers who are about to witness the diverse world that awaits you.
May be blessed by the mother nature to fulfill your duties
Leave your footprints somewhere so that you can be satisfied thinking
"We did our part..."
Which would guide us
in the right direction to heal the world.

• 225 days! —

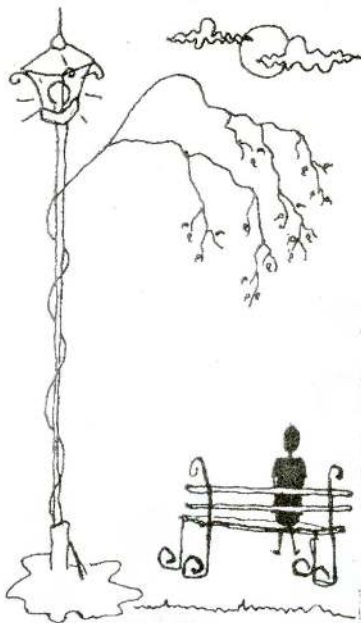

It was 225 days,
 It was 7 & half months,
 It was many many hours,
 Many many lonely hours

Days were far too long it seemed,
 Days when I stared at the sky,
 Towards Southern Skies,
 Towards Sri Lanka

There were so many memories,
 Which belong to the soil of my mother land,
 Buried deep deep inside my heart,
 I thought of them all over & over again...

I wished time would go fast,
 When I'm away
 I wished time would go slow,
 When I'm near

Maybe it's our fate,
 The forces which we cannot control,
 God, Please give me strength,
 To bear all the pain
