If kept perfectly dry, they will live shot up in their shells for years.

—HOMELESS CARRIAGES. Carriages drawn by motor affixed beneath, and steered by the occupant, are coming into use in countries where there are good level roads. They will go a good deal faster than a horse and can be managed as easily. Quite recently there was a race in France for a distance of over 700 miles. There were 16 vehicles entered for the race, 10 of which used petroleum as motive power, 5 steam and one electricity. The winner averaged a speed of nearly 16 miles an hour. In Paris a horseless carriage driven by a petroleum engine is so common a sight, that it attracts no comment.

—THE DISTRICT JUDGE. Mr. Nevil has been far from being well for about two weeks. He had an attack of malarial fever and is said to be improving under the treatment of Doctor Elyatamy. Mr. G. W. Woodhouse the P. M. Jaffna, has been gazetted to act for him from the 5th inst. Work in the District Court has considerably diminished which is attributed to several causes and there is a general waiting among several who have chosen the legal profession.

—THE MELLAGAM COURT. The last ten year's records of this Court have been removed on the 4th inst. from the record room of the Jaffna Minor Court to be deposited in the record room of the Mellagam Court. The clerks attached to this Court have also been ordered to attend at Mellagam in consequence of the removal of the records. This arrangement is supposed to calculate convenience to the authors, although Mellagam and Jaffna Minor Courts have concurrent jurisdiction in matters both civil and criminal.

—LAND REGISTRAR. Mr. T. C. Changampillai, Supreme Court Proctor, is acting for Mr. Comarish who is laid up with fever.

—JURISDICTION OF THE COURT OR BEQUEST. The Draft has appeared in the Gazette, clothing Minor Courts with increased power and enhancing the privileges of the Commissioner. The jurisdiction is raised to Rs. 300. The help of a pleader and the right to appeal are restricted to the editors. The Draft embodies a few other provisions which are not however of a grave nature than the above.

As appears from the List of the provisions, this ordinance appears to have been drafted at the instance of the Retirement Committee. Already much indignation prevails among the public. Opposition meetings have been held by the Mohammedan and Singhalese communities, to prevent the passing of this Bill. The members of the metropolitan bar convened to raise their voices against it and the opinions of the press are wholly in favour of the Bill, and Magistrate who are perfectly innocent in the matter of the Bill, are hopelessly exposed in the papers. The Retirement Committee, it is believed, is planning radical changes in all departments to reduce the expenses of the Colony, and we trust that their schemes will be such as to be beneficial to the governing and the governed.

—BATTICALOA NOTES.

—PERSONAL. The new District Judge has arrived with his lady and assumed duties. He is gaining golden opinions. Our much esteemed Government Agent Mr. Fisher has just returned from attendance at the Durbar, Rev. J. S. Corlett, who is in charge of the Tamil work in Colombo, has lately visited us and delivered a lecture on "Manu (people of the Isle of Man of which he was a native) their customs and superstitions." To-day Aug. 24 our Lady Doctor Miss Taylor, leaves this for Jaffna on one month's leave. She goes there with the double purpose of recruiting her health and of studying the means and measures adopted by the medical missionaries the Drs. Scott, in Jaffna.

Messrs Lenbruggen and Tampapily are expected here from Trincomalee to-day and they will begin examining the schools on the 26th inst.

—ANNIVERSARY FESTIVITIES. The 15th Aug. was a gala day with the Wesleyans of Batticaloa. It was on or about that date when the first missionary, the Rev. William Ault from England, arrived here 81 years ago. An all day meeting was held in commemoration of his arrival.

First of all there was a powerful praise-prayer meeting conducted by our Tamil pastor Rev. W. M. Walton. About half past eight, the commemoration meeting which was really the meeting of the day, was held presided over by the Senior Steward of the church, the Chief Medlar Mr. Sonamadar. After a few preliminary remarks, he called upon Rev. R. W. Sethupathi, M.A., to address the meeting who gave a graphic description of the voyage, adventures and arrivals of the first missionaries. Next to him Mr. S. A. Crowley spoke in English about the work in Batticaloa. Rev. J. West spoke of the different religions in Ceylon drawing out different colors of ribbon to show the different religions of the island, the largest red ribbon showing the largest Buddhist population, and the smallest white ribbon to show the proportion of Protestants. Mr. K. C. Kaurigama followed and referred to the prominent men of the place who had passed away.

In the afternoon a children's meeting was held in Victoria Hall and addresses made by Mr. E. D. Sonamadar, Rev. J. Fletcher, and Mr. Samuel Vathanayagam.

At the close of this meeting refreshments were served and then the children indulged in several games. The concluding service of the day was a thanksgiving and concluding meeting when Revds. E. M. Weaver, W. M. Walton and S. N. G. Elyatamy Mody, were the principal speakers.

Over Rs. 500 was promised in aid of church restoration and the "Anti Gospel Memorial funds."

The whole day's doings were very enjoyable, and the meetings admirably arranged for and conducted under the superintendence of Rev. J. West, the senior missionary.

DIVINE HEALING.

[A paper read by Rev. T. B. Scott, M.D. at the monthly meeting of missionaries held at Nellore on the 2nd inst., published by request of the missionaries present. Ed. M. S.]

We may define this doctrine as the belief that healing from all forms of disease may be had from God simply by means of the prayer of faith without the employment of any remedial measures. It has been carried by some to the extreme that to use the ordinary means of healing while praying to God for health is an indication that our faith in Him is not sufficiently strong, and thus dishonor is offered to God. So often has health thus been permanently impaired, and even death indirectly caused that it is a source of genuine sorrow to many.

The Scripture passage, "Himself took our infirmities and bore our sickness" (Matt. VIII: 17) is cited, and from it the inference is drawn that we may have health for the acceptance of it through faith, as we obtain forgiveness of sin and eternal life.

Another passage often quoted is this. Jas. V: 14, 15. "Is any sick among you; let him call for the elders of the church and let them pray over him, anointing him with oil in the name of the Lord, and the prayer of faith shall save the sick." In the early days of the Christian Era oil was an almost universal panacea for disease. Accepting this fact, we but learn from the passage that we should have recourse to the prayer of faith while using the prescriptions of an enlightened pharmacy.

It appears to us that this is the only wise course for us to pursue. As Christians, we acknowledge that all our blessings come from God. We delight to ascribe all honor to Him for the bestowal of these gifts. Among the gifts for which we offer praise to God are food and raiment. May we assume that because Jesus fed some miraculously, and to others spoke the admonition, take no thought for food and raiment etc. for your Heavenly Father knoweth that ye have need of all these things, therefore, we should make no effort to avail ourselves of the fruits, grains etc. He has provided for the sustenance of His creatures. Is it not unwise to expose ourselves to the direct rays of an equatorial sun and expect no injury to result therefrom? Is it not inconsistent with the known laws of physiology to neglect to eat good food and expect to maintain vigorous strength. Miracles are not wrought to avoid the necessity of having regard to natural laws. The believer in Jesus Christ must as certainly perish if submerged beyond a certain length of time under water, as an unbeliever. Why should we expect that natural laws, or God's laws, should be disregarded because we have faith in Jesus Christ. What is food more than the remedies used by physicians? Some medicines prescribed have much of their value from the food material they supply. As good food supplies not only material but stimulus to the various organs of the body in the discharge of their functions, so does medicine, which is but special food to special organs.

We would magnify the value of prayer to God for health, but we would not separate from prayer the petition for blessing on the means used. The farmer who prays for a blessing on his labors does not expect wheat to grow unless he sows seed wheat. It is a Divine law fixed in every department of life that we must employ the means at our disposal if we would secure the desired blessing. If we had the right to expect healing invariably from God as the answer to prayer would not Christians be practically immortal. While we deprecate the value of prayer without using remedial measures, we recognize that prayer should be our sheet anchor, for all agencies are under the direct control of God who giveth or withholdeth blessing.

But we will be answered; facts will support us that God has answered prayer to the healing of the body in many cases. We grant that. Far be it from us to say that God can only work on certain prescribed lines. He does interpose His gracious hand when other means fail. That God can work miracles and still occasionally does we will allow. But the inference that all must depend on faith alone, because God has honored it in some cases we dispute. Moreover we will try to show that all that is accredited as Faith Healing need not be interpreted as the intervention of God through other than the ordinary natural laws. No fact is better attested in medicine than the powerful influence the mind exerts over the body. It is universally acknowledged and utilized by the medical profession. This has been called by some mendicure. In many cases of illness of nervous origin, the physician depends partly on what is called moral influence. The patient is led to expect certain desired results and this expectation aids in accomplishing the end longed for. This is a form of faith cure, but simply faith in the word of the trusted physician. So, likewise, fear may exercise a cure through the medium of the mind. Instances are on record of persons long bed-ridden who under the stimulus of fear, as of a burning house, have arisen and walked with no real difficulty. As faith, or fear, can effect a cure, so, likewise, do they at times produce illness. The effect of the mind dwelling on a certain sea voyage will cause certain well known inward pains which if not comparable to mal de mer, at least are not comfortable. In epidemics of cholera persons die of a disease that closely simulates cholera, which is really a disturbance of the natural functions through fear. Thus powerfully does the mind, work on the body. In persons of a devout mind the prayer of faith, and the exercise of the mind through faith in God, may produce the desired cure.

That faith cures independently of the object of faith is shown on good testimony. Cures are obtained as the result of faith, whether the faith be placed in God, or in some human being, on a relic, or a senseless image, a dead saint, or a quack medicine, in many things, in fact, quite powerless in themselves.

In the course of his reign, Charles II "touched" 42 thousands, and the physicians of his day say the cures were numerous, and rapid. Those who were not cured were said to be denied it through "want of faith." In 1771, Father Hehl of Vienna cured many by the application to the body of certain curiously wrought steel plates which were supposed to convey some magnetic influence from him to the sufferer.

At Aix la chapelle, cripples are cured by the touch of the thigh bone of Charlemagne. If, then, apparently inert things such as these, possess apparently unquestionable curative power, because the faith reposed in them resulted in cure, how great the caution necessary in claiming that the common faith cures are the result of divine operation regardless of natural laws.

It would be well to remember, in the statistics of faith-healing institutions, we are not told how many failed to receive cure. Again, it will be noted that many of the cases reported cured are of nervous origin, rather than organic disease. Dr. Cullis of Boston has a faith cure Home. But on the same grounds he has a Home for incurables recognizing the inability of faith alone in some diseases.

There is great lack of authenticated reports of cure of organic disease, the cure of which instantaneously, by faith would be considered miraculous. Those that have the greatest appearance of being organic disease are in great probability of obscure nervous origin, where the physician was mistaken. Such unfrequently happens, for some forms of disease can simulate organic disease so closely that the most acute observer may be deceived.

In conclusion, we wish again to say that we would not underrate the power of God to cure with or without means, but we believe that He intends that we should use the measures placed so generously at our disposal by Him, seeking always His blessing on the means used.

REPORT OF THE DIRECTOR OF PUB. INST., 1894.

We were greatly interested in glancing over the report, full as it is of statistics which are generally considered dry reading. It was interesting to note the progress that has been made in education during the year under review. The number of schools increased by 42; and the number of scholars reported, by 8,056 over 1893. The total number under instruction in 1894 in all schools, i.e. Government, Grant-in-aid, and unaided schools, was 163,910 of which over half, or 85,968, were in grant-in-aid schools. We were surprised to find so large a number reported from unaided schools—no less than 32,576 pupils. The total number of all schools in the island was 3,918, not a bad showing by any means. In proportion to the population, the number of children under instruction in the Western Province is one to every 12 of the inhabitants. The Northern Province comes second in the list, with one in 13; and the Eastern Province makes the third, with one in 19 which is also the average for the whole island. Strange to say the Central Province with its learned Buddhist priests, is only sixth in the list with one in 28. Turning now to the number of these pupils who were presented for examination in 1894, it is interesting to note that whereas in grant-in-aid schools the percentage presented for examination out of the total number enrolled is 52, in Govt. schools (omitting of course the number presented in the Alphabet class which is not allowed in grant-in-aid schools) the percentage is only about 42. We do not know whether the total number reported includes the Royal College and the Technical school or not, but even if it does, and the numbers enrolled in these institutions be deducted, the percentage in Government would be less than in grant-in-aid schools. Perhaps this is due to the fact that better percentages of pass are required in Govt. schools than in grant-in-aid.

The Director reports without comment, only 9 Training schools as compared with 14 last year. Of these 6 are in the Jaffna peninsula passing in first year's examination 15, and in second year's 11. The remaining three schools report 5 in first year's, and 3 in second year's.

The examination for licenses held in the middle of the year resulted in 11 passing the First-class license, and 22 the second class. Besides these, 45 other certificates were given during the year. The number of licensed and certificate teachers must now be nearly or quite enough to meet the demands.

The Girl's Boarding schools in the island number 23, of which no less than six are in the Jaffna peninsula. These six presented 331 girls in the Government examination in 1894, and the other 17 presented 746, making a total number of girls presented in the Boarding schools of the island in that year of 1077. We contend that since Jaffna is so largely represented in this class of schools, due weight should be given to the suggestions and remonstrances of the Managers of the N. P. in regard to these schools.

The Director has considerable to say in regard to the teaching of English, but as we have touched upon this subject in a recent issue, we forbear adding any more at this time. We might say in general that he seems determined to improve the quality of the English taught in the schools, and so far as we can see the changes to be made in the Code for 1896 are good.

The latest and newest Code will appear in November, with its usual number of changes, some for the better and some, we fear, for the worse; but hereafter its provisions will not be enforced until after the first day of the following July.

CHRISTIANITY AND OTHER RELIGIONS.

Mr. Carey, of the Baptist Missionary Society, speaking before the Baptist Union, and referring to the late Parliament of Religions at Chicago, gave utterance to the following weighty words:

"I do not believe that it is right to admit, upon a platform of faith any other than Christ. I do not hold that any such tolerance is anything but treachery to him and I cannot reconcile it to my loyalty to him to allow for a single moment that any other should dare to rival his throne. That kind of leniency which seems to admit that all religions have a claim upon the attention of mankind, Christ among the rest, the people of India rejoice in. They will welcome with open arms the man from whose mouth such views come, but they are not the views which the soldier of Christ feels that he can hold or can utter in a country which will not allow Christ the chiefest place. I will admit upon any platform, other than the platform of faith, and upon equal terms, a Hindu or Mahomedan or the representative of any other faith; but if you ask me what position I mean to take up with regard to the Christian religion, I say that I feel compelled to preach an all-conquering and all-destroying faith, at the head of which is the glorious Christ."

NEWS FROM THE WIDE WORLD.

—CHINA. The German government has assured missionaries from the father land working in China of the fullest protection. Indigo-dyeing meetings have been held in some of the treaty ports of China by the foreigners denouncing the treaty of the British Government and calling upon Lord Salisbury to demand full satisfaction from the Chinese government. The death of Baby Stewart, who received a severe cut on the head, makes the total number of killed 11. A telegram of the 28th Aug. says that 10 of the secretaries of the Vegetarian Society have been convicted of murder. A telegram of the 2nd September says that Chinese Christians are being persecuted and their houses plundered and burnt.

The Viceroy Li-Hung-Chang has been transferred to Pekin and made Imperial Chancellor.

—JAPAN.—The Japanese are evacuating Port Arthur and demolishing the forts.

—FRANCE. An attempt was made to kill Baron Rothschild, in Paris, by an explosive packet. The Baron escaped but his Private Secretary had one finger and one eye shattered.

—MADAGASCAR. They have captured the town of Andibala, the Hova having been driven out. The mortality in the French army is frightful. Five thousand are now in the hospitals.

—ARMENIA. The Sultan of Turkey has complained to France and Russia of what he calls, the disreputable attitude of Great Britain on the Armenian question, and has asked them to induce Great Britain to modify her demands.
