Housewarming. Mr. M. B. Swampillai the well-known and popular merchant of our town and the son of the lamented Mr. M. Bastiampillai who was famous for his study in Tamil Literature and a classmate of that eminent pundit "Arumuga Navalar" celebrated the occasion of entering his new built house in 4th Cross Street, Pettala, with great éclat on the night of Wednesday the 8th inst. when in response to invitations already issued a large number of the residents of Jaffna assembled. We were shown round over the whole building which is of excellent workmanship and were greatly pleased with everything we saw. No one can deny the strict integrity and the sound education he received in St. Patrick's College and afterwards at St. Thomas College, Colombo. Mr. S. is the son-in-law of Mr. S. Pathirappillai one of our well-known townsmen, and is a brother-in-law of Sathurath the Acting Police Magistrate of Putlam, and also of Dr. Evans, the present Medical Officer of Kankasanturai. Credit should be given to Head Master Vairanathan and his son Appakutti and to Blacksmith Joseph for the manner in which some of the works of art were done on under their own design and supervision. Her Christian faith was noticeable during the illness. The parting words were "I come".

We deeply sympathize with the bereaved husband, children and others.

The Thillappalai Industrial School. A man who has to be at his desk every day except on Sundays finds it a great pleasure when he gets a holiday. Cutting aside his sweat-drenched official dress he longs like a caged bird set at liberty to roam about wherever he pleases. To such a person a visit to some interesting place such as the Thillappalai Industrial School will be very enjoyable.

From a long time I had longed to pay a visit to Thillappalai Industrial School of which I had heard and read much, but circumstances prevented my accomplishing this object ere this. Taking advantage of the Easter holidays I drove on the morning of the 6th inst. with the main object of visiting the Industrial school. On my arrival at my destination I found that the students were away at their homes for the holidays, except a few who had chosen to remain and work during the vacation, in addition to the heads of the various departments, Messrs. Tennant and Levins of whom the former is the superintendent of the Industrial School, very kindly welcomed me and explained to me everything that I did not know. The big sewing machine is a sight worth seeing. In the dining room I saw more than half a dozen very beautiful new tables and stools made to the order of somebody at Pt. Pedro. Having inspected the floor I proceeded upstairs where the Book-binding is located. Other works are also done here. Here for the first time I saw a new lever cutting machine. The guillotine cutting machine in which a knife is brought down by turning a wheel is far better than the above-said lever cutting machine as the work is done much faster, but it is only a matter of money.

I find that the Industrial School is hard pressed for funds. Everybody knows what large sums are required to fully equip a school of this kind. The missionary who is in charge of this School has spared no pains to make it a well equipped School, but funds are still urgently needed to clear away debts and for the purchase of new apparatus. I also hear that a machine for pounding rice is shortly expected. Let every lover of his native country come forward and render what pecuniary aid he can, com.

X RAYS.

Can the working of the brain be seen? Can one see a man think? Prof. Edison, the famous electrician, believes that he is long this will be an accomplished fact, or at least that it will be possible to examine the brain. He as well as many another scientist is busy experimenting with the new discovery just given to the world i. e. the "X" rays as they are called.

In January last Professor Roentgen of Wurtzburg University made known to the world the result of his experiments with light. For the sake of brevity he calls them X rays. Just what they are, it would not be safe at this early day, to state. They are produced by the help of electricity and applied in photography. By the means of these rays substances which here-tofore have been considered opaque, become transparent. To quote from a recent Review, "Roentgen has photographed through the human hand, and revealed upon a photographic plate the carpal and metacarpal bones—the very skeleton within. Proceeding upon the principle that the bones of the hand can be distinctly photographed through the flesh, various scientists have undertaken to locate, by means of the X rays, fractures in the human skeleton and derangements of the internal organs; and it newspaper reports can be credited, with encouraging success. We read that employing the "new light" a Vienna surgeon is located a grain of shot in the hand of a subject, and successfully examined a fractured bone in a foot. Roentgen himself has discovered internal flaws in metals with his rays, and it is reported the Government inspectors stationed at Carnegie Steel works, Pittsburgh, are similarly examining armor plate for war vessels." These experiments indicate the uses to which these rays may be put. It will not be every one who can afford to have the necessary apparatus for the successful operation of this new light, but it is certain to be extensively used by physicians and surgeons, and be a great boon to suffering humanity.

The Medical Record of Feb. 15th, raises the query whether "we may not hope, with the perfection of methods, that all the hitherto hidden recesses of the body may yet yield their tribute to the new light and open to view many, if not all, of the abnormal processes of the living body, as effectually as does the post-mortem knife in the hands of the most skillful pathologist." And a correspondent in a recent issue of the Lancet wonders whether these rays may not be utilized in the destruction of germs inside the body.

There are many other uses to which this wonderful discovery, after it has been fully perfected, may be put. For example flaws in metals may be discovered; and possibly the existence of ore in the earth may be located. Contents of boxes, bags, purses, &c. may be revealed by this process, and in this and other ways prove useful in the detection of crime. In fact it is hardly possible to over estimate the great value of this discovery and we wait with interest further developments.

THE RED-CROSS SOCIETY.

The recent atrocities in Armenia and the terrible suffering which inevitably follows such acts call attention to the means used to alleviate wide-spread suffering. The Red-Cross Society, which has accomplished so much good in other lands, has penetrated into Armenia and is distributing relief, with means furnished by many generous hearts, under the direction of Miss Clara Barton, President of the American branch of the Society. It may be of interest to learn something of the founding of this Society.

Jean Henri Dunant, born May 28, 1828, in Geneva, is a descendant of an old patrician family, whose members even before the Reformation had secured an important place in this proud city. In Geneva he belonged to a society of distinguished young people devoted to the assistance of the poor and unfortunate, and as early as 1849 he began to consider the formation of a great international league for the alleviation of misfortune of all kinds. He is the author of that great international treaty which under the name of the Geneva Convention was agreed to August 22, 1864, by Switzerland, Baden, Belgium, Denmark, Spain, France, Hesse, Italy, the Netherlands, Portugal, Prussia, Saxony, and Wurtemberg, and afterwards at the Conference at Berlin, 1868, by thirty-three more states; today the civilized people of five continents and even half-barbaric states such as Siam and China, have accepted the Red Cross. At a meeting of the Geneva Society for the Public Welfare held February 17, 1863, it was decided to draw up a memorandum of a scheme for the formation of a corps for voluntary assistance for the poor, to be submitted to the international congress of charities that was to meet at Berlin late in the following summer. That congress, however, did not materialize, so Dunant and his friends, the president of the club, urged the adoption of an international congress at Geneva. From now on Dunant developed an almost superhuman activity; he rushed from court to court, from minister to minister, everywhere to win adherents to his idea. Only with such energy of action and agitation, combined with such worldly tact as he possessed, could the congress be brought about, for there was something unheard of in the very idea of a private citizen backed by a few of his friends presuming to convene the powers of Europe in a congress.

In September Dunant hurried to Berlin to the international statistical congress, where he took lodgings in common with the physician in ordinary of the king of Holland, Dr. Basting, whose acquaintance he had previously made, and who as an inspired partizan of his idea became the soul of the Red Cross in Holland.

The affairs came up for consideration in the fourth session of the congress, which took up a comparison of health and death statistics between soldiers and civilians. Dunant and Basting gave brief accounts of the projects and the manner of their execution. The session unanimously gave its approval in regard to the formation of voluntary sanitary corps in all states, but did not consider itself competent to pass an explicit resolution on the fore-mentioned Geneva congress for the neutralization of the wounded; therefore the assembled congress in its last sentence unanimously expressed a wish for the success of that congress in which "all governments should recognize as neutral persons the wounded, the military and volunteer physicians, and their assistants."

Dunant immediately issued a circular setting forth the resolution, which was sent to all the ministers of war and foreign ministers as well as to the prominent men of all countries. With incessant activity he worked to promote the idea of the projected congress among persons of high degree. Crown Prince Frederick William encouraged him to persevere in his project. In other courts too he met with friendly advances. In April, 1864, Dr. de L'huys in the name of Emperor Napoleon sent to all the powers a diplomatic communication inviting them to a congress of nations for agreement on an international treaty. The nations had solved their problem.

It was the first great world's treaty to be concluded, the first one international on a large scale, and it broke the path for later similar treaties in other lines of work. This world-embracing agreement was brought into prominence during the great war of 1870—1 between France and Germany, when it proved a blessing to unnumbered thousands.

For a great world-embracing idea his man gave up all his life and half his property, gave up the happiness of his home and family. Later through misfortune he lost the other half of his wealth; then quietly withdrew from the world to a rural infirmary. Here, forsaken and poor but not broken and embittered he still works at his old plan. Asking of the world nothing for himself, but only desiring it to carry out his plans for its own good, this noble man is as great today as he was the height of his power.

At the time of the Geneva Convention the United States being in the midst of a Civil War and having little thought for anything outside, sent no delegates. But later through the personal influence of Clara Barton an American branch was organized and incorporated into the international society. She had been one of the leaders in organizing relief for the wounded in the Civil War, and had been a most efficient nurse at the front. She has been variously engaged in furthering the work and extending the operations of the society to affording relief to sufferers in times of fire or flood or earthquake. And she was the first to volunteer to carry relief to the Armenians in their present calamities.

The name of the Red Cross is given to the society from the emblem adopted for their protection in time of war, namely, a Greek red cross on a white flag. All honour to the noble men and women through whose efforts the society has been formed and the work of relieving sufferers is carried on.

NEWS FROM THE WIDE WORLD.

—The death of Sir Julian Goldsmid, perhaps the chief leader of the Jewish Community in England, recalls the fact that his father Sir Francis Goldsmid was the first Jew ever called to the English bar. For a long time he and John Simon and Jacob Waley were the only three Jewish barristers in England. The struggle for Jewish emancipation was fought by Sir Julian's grand father and father, Sir Isaac and Sir Francis, and the latter often had occasion to plead in the House of Commons for his oppressed brethren in foreign countries. The Goldsmids were practically the founders of the University of London, and there is no other name which stands in such prominence in Anglo-Jewish history except that of Sir Moses Montefiore.

—By the will of the late E. J. Donnell of New York City, after certain special bequests and annuities, his entire estate amounting to about $630,000, is left to the New York Free Circulating Library, to erect a fireproof building to be called the Donnell Free Circulating Library and to have the same to be supplied with all the latest magazines and periodicals, and made as attractive as possible to young men, so that they may improve their minds and be kept from demoralizing influences.

—The charitable bequests under wills reported during the past year in England amounted to over £ 1,450,000, the yearly average being about £ 1,100,000.

—The young Emperors of Russia, in spite of her domestic cares, continues to show the liveliest interest in the cause of temperance. Latterly she has had interviews with several provincial Governors, who were in Petersburg in connection with the duties of their Governments, also with Court Sheremieteff, Governor General of the Caucasus as to the best means of checking the fearful increase of intemperance among the peasantry. It is understood that the Emperor intends to issue a ukase, by which the country, no one but females will be allowed the privileges of membership.

—The Queen of Portugal has shown a remarkable aptitude for the study of medicine. She works at this subject diligently and has already passed her third examination. Her medical library is the best of its kind in Portugal, and as she reads fluently French, English and Italian, the tendency to great cities of ancient Greece has been thoroughly studied, and on the site of Corinth there is no such modern city as interferes with the study of ancient Athens. Work is to begin in March, and in the first year but little more than a beginning can be made on a work that must last for four or five years at least.
