WHERE EAST MEETS WEST

Istanbul—The Confluence Of Cultures

THE grand tradition symbolized by Istanbul, a city of baffling charm and vivid contrasts deserves the attention of all Asian nations. Traversing the whole of Turkey from Mosul (in its Eastern frontier with Iraq), and passing through Aleppo (in its Southern frontier with Syria), I came to the new Capital of Ankara, built by Kamal Ataturk the Great. His memory is enshrined in the heart of every man and woman of the new-born Turkish Republic, rising like the legendary Phoenix—from the conflagration and crash of the old Turkish empire. While being conducted to the room of the learned Minister of Education, I was thrilled to read on the wall, the words of Ataturk, inscribed in letters of gold, saying that "the future of new Turkey is organically connected with the progress of the humblest peasantry of Anatolia". For, as we all know, Ataturk defied the sinister coalition of the post-war European diplomats with Greece against Turkey, and out of that fiery trial, Turkey emerged triumphant, chasing the European intruders out of Asiatic Turkey. The secret of that success was the same as that of Mahatma Gandhi who, like Ataturk, (as I explained in my lectures at the Universities of Ankara and of Istanbul, 1950) developed the ideal of the national state into the welfare state for the benefit of the humblest and the lowliest of the land. After my lecture, I was welcomed into the home of Begum Halide-Edib, M. P. and renowned novelist whom I had welcomed in our University of Calcutta. She made eager enquiries about the rising generation of Indian womanhood, inspired by the ideals of Tagore and Gandhi, who, alas—as she said—are no more to guide Asia in the present critical period of our history.

Through the kindness of my generous host H. E. C. S. Jha, Indian Ambassador at Ankara, I got the rare opportunity of discussing many a historical and archaeological problem of Turkey with H. E. Dr. Fuat Koprulu. He is not only the present Minister of Foreign Affairs, but the leading historian of Turkey; and I am deeply grateful to him for affording all facilities for my rather dangerous excursion to the deserted Hittite Capital, Boghaz Koi, where the hills were covered with snow and I could go only with a military jeep. It is a privilege worth risking one's life; for, since our early college days we have been reading about the sensational discovery in 1908 by the German explorer Hugo Winckler—discovery of the 14th century B. C. inscription, clearly referring to our ancestral Vedic Gods: Mitra, Varuna, Indra and Nasatya (Ashwini Kumars) were invoked by the two belligerent nations—the Hittites and the Mitannis,—both speaking Indo-European language and probably remote cousins of our Indo-Iranian family. Some members thereof were, in the 2nd millennium B. C., moving in different parts of Western Asia, contacting the Kassites of Babylon (18th century B. C.) and reaching the Eastern Mediterranean in the Homeric age, rediscovered by archaeologists in Troy and Ephesus (now in Turkey) and in Mycenae and Ithaca, etc. of Iliad and Odyssey.

The Common Man

His Sense Of Right Values

Speaking at the convocation of the Delhi University the world famous Constitutional Authority Sri Alladi Krishnaswamy Iyer deprecated the tendencies of parties without any common link combining to unseat an existing Government impelled by mere hatred or dislike of it said he.

"Democracy, was in many respects the most difficult form of Government. The experience of modern democracies and especially of England and the Dominions that have followed its example shows that the proper functioning of democratic institutions and responsible governments depends upon the existence of a healthy or genuine party system based upon differences in ideals and approach to public questions and an opposition which has sufficient unity of purpose to take up the responsibilities of government if and when the existing government is defeated. The mere hatred or dislike of an existing government by a number of parties without any common link and with no common ideas or ideals animating them will not assist the evolution of a genuine or healthy responsible government."

"The present century has been frequently described as the century of the common man. The great and difficult task is how to impart the sense of right values to him. That task devolves on the educated man and the products of our university education. In every sphere of his activity, the educated man will have to remember his duty and his obligations to society. The part played by him in the shaping of democratic thought and action, to a large extent, depends upon the use made by him of these powerful instruments for the dissemination of knowledge and information."

PRELIMINARY OBSERVATIONS ON PROPOSED BILL

Need for Ascertaining Public Opinion

(By S. Sivasubramaniam)

Please permit me to express some preliminary thoughts regarding the proposed Bill in respect of Hindu Temples and Religious Trusts. I am not referring now to the substance of the Bill, but only to certain aspects relating to procedure. These submissions are made as a humble contribution from a Hindu and Ceylonese towards the cause of greater unity among the Hindu Community and corresponding agreement between the Hindu Community on the one hand and the rest of Ceylon including Parliament and the Government on the other hand. It is obvious that such two fold unity is very desirable.

I
The interval of time between the publication of the Bill and its introduction in Parliament is too short. Longer time is required for its consideration by the public. The opinions of Hindu Members of Parliament (consisting of the Senate and House of Representatives) are no doubt entitled to great weight but cannot be conclusive unless they are supported by general Hindu public opinion. It is therefore necessary to allow sufficient time to elapse and ascertain Hindu public opinion regarding the proposed Bill. At present the views of the Hindu members of Parliament and the Hindu public regarding the proposed Bill have not been made known.

II
Translation of the Bill into Tamil is necessary for consideration by the public and thereafter by Parliament. The majority of the people interested are Tamil speaking. A translation is not available now; I understand that it will be available shortly.

III
The public should be given an opportunity to make considered representations to the Government and to Parliament after adequate study before the Bill is introduced.

IV

Before the public is given this opportunity it would not be fair or politic for the Government spokesmen in Parliament to express views one way or other.

V

The protection of Hindu religious trusts and temples even as it is the duty of the Hindus to set their house in order is a very important duty cast on the State but the best method of achieving this object has to be devised, special regard being had to the manner and extent of the intervention and assistance by the State so as not to interfere with religion or religious practice or religious custom. Among other things, reference to the Soulbury Constitution, Soulbury Commissioner's Report and the Prime Minister's declarations prior to and about the time of the promulgation of the constitution might be helpful.

VI

Damage either to the Hindu Community or to the State, or to the Government or to Sinhalese-Tamil understanding should not be caused by erring on either side.

VII

It would be in the fitness of things if non-Tamil particularly Sinhalese leaders discuss with Hindu leaders both in and out of Parliament regarding the substance of the Bill and the opportune time and circumstances in which action should be taken.

VIII

In the circumstances, even the bare introduction of the Bill in parliament

Treasure These Thoughts

Immortality and death—both are established in the body; death takes place out of ignorance; immortality comes as a result of truth

MAYOR MAKING

THE Jaffna Municipal elections have been won and lost. Even the shouting has died down. But there remains a very responsible duty yet to be performed and that by those who have won the confidence of the voters at the recent polls. Is it Mayor making or Mayor choosing? This is a pertinent question and one that requires to be answered.

Choosing a Mayor is one thing and making a member a mayor is another. The former suggests the free choice of the City Fathers, the choice of the member whom they consider to be fit to occupy the high position of responsibility. The latter cannot be said to imply any such characteristic; it merely means that all forces of persuasion gentle and otherwise have to be marshalled to achieve the purpose.

Unanimity of selection is implied in choice. In the election of the chairman of a local government body the element of all round agreeableness is desirable in as much as constitutionalists wish for the election of uncontested Speakers of Parliaments. Only a City Father in whom all the qualities that go to make an impartial chairman are beneficially blended can conscientiously agree to shoulder the heavy responsibilities that Mayoralty carries with it. It is not high academic qualification, nor ability not even experience that counts. Character that can give the possessor the mental courage to rise above personal prejudice is the one attribute that a Mayor should have if he should hope to steer the ship of city administration clear of hot currents and cold drifts that are notorious for submarine pulls.

The democratic system of government calls for the

Adequate Water Supply For Jaffna

Premier's Promise

At a Conference called by the Prime Minister in his capacity as Minister for Local Government, the promise was given by the Premier to the Municipal Commissioner of Jaffna, Mr. K. Shanmugam, that an adequate water supply would be provided for Jaffna as early as possible. There was, however, a condition precedent to the assurance that the Scheme to be adopted should have the approval of the Municipal Council because of the existence of opposition to the various schemes proposed from time to time since 1923.

The Central Government has undertaken to bear by way of grant the cost of the entire construction of the wells to be sunk on the Irupalai Kondavil road. The cost of distribution will, however, have to be met by the Municipal Council.

Capital Punishment For Communist Leaders

New Turkish Law

According to a Bill approved by the Turkish National Assembly on December 3, leadership of the Communist Party has been made a crime punishable by death. The Communist Leaders are in danger of losing their heads physically. Figuratively it might have been so already else the Law might not have been enacted!

Penalties of the rank and file members of Communist parties also have been laid down.

existence of parties but it does also demand that once a member of an assembly gets exalted to the position of high responsibility of guiding the affairs of the institution he ipso facto ceases to belong to any party or group. We hope that the City Fathers of Jaffna will rise above cliquism and strive to liquidate cabals if such exist and resolve to arrive at a unanimous decision in the matter of electing a Mayor and earn for themselves and for the North a glorious name for prudence in practice.

Challenging Point of Order

Speaker's Ruling

They all had a happy flight in the realms of constitutional procedure, the Opposition Leaders in full combination with only the Minister of Industries as Government Spokesman. But the Speaker true to the distinguished traditions of his office gave his ruling which in the absence of a precedent ably created one worthy of emulation by other parliamentarians the world over.

The New Procedure

"If a Member is dissatisfied with a ruling given by me in Chambers in respect of a motion, he could inform me accordingly and arrange to bring the matter before the House after question."

"He would then in open House mention his notice of motion and inquire why it has not been placed in the Order Book. This will afford Mr. Speaker an opportunity to inform the House of his ruling on the notice of motion. It will then be left to the Member concerned to take further steps in the matter if he so desires."

What redounded to the glory of the Speaker was his decision that the debate on the Motion of the Leader of the Opposition should be allowed.

Mayoral Motion

The motion of the leader of the House empowering the standing committee A to have power to insert provision in the Local Authorities (Election of officials) Bill which they are at present considering to extend the term of office of Mayors and Deputy Mayors was carried by 45 votes to 28 only after the Front Bench Opposition Leaders had formally objected to the proposal.

Where East Meets West

self installed in the magic city of Istanbul on the Bosphorus. Mr. Kidwai, the Indian Press-Attache and his wife were very kind to me and introduced me to the leading scholars and statesmen of the city. I carried letters of introduction from the Turkish Ambassador of Iran, Y. K. Karacahanoglu, the renowned Turkish novelist and friend of Ataturk. He and his wife welcomed me at Teheran and urged me not to miss Turkey in course of my cultural mission through the Middle East. He introduced me to Prof. Dr. Hikmet Birand, Director of the University of Ankara, and also to Prof. Omer Celal Sire, the eminent mathematician, Rector of the University of Istanbul. I reminded him that Istanbul and its great university should get ready to celebrate the great epoch-making date of 1453, when, with the conquest of Constantinople, the capital of the Eastern Roman empire, Turkey opened a new chapter in the relations between the East and the West. And we Orientals should co-operate in publishing a Commemoration Volume of the 500th—Anniversary of Istanbul and the emergence of the creative epoch of European Renaissance. The learned Rector welcomed my idea and hinted in a friendly way that I should migrate to Istanbul for a while and help him in materializing the project.

Venue of Oriental Congress

Meanwhile, the University of Istanbul was selected as the venue of the 22nd Congress of Orientalists to which I was invited by its learned President Prof. Z. V. Tegan and his Secretary Dr. Bulent Davran. Expressing to them my regret for not being able to attend the Congress in person I requested them to circulate my project which I had partially printed in my New Asia on the occasion of the First Asian Relations Conference, invited by Pandit Jawaharlal Nehru to Delhi, in 1947. I submitted that we should now try to rectify the abject dependence of Asian scholars on European and American books of reference, like the Encyclopaedia Britannica, which often distorts our cultural, religious, economic and political history. We should get ready to compile, edit and publish in fascicules a systematic Encyclopaedia Asiana, in every sense worthy of the title. Turkey has given us lead in Romanization, to solve the script-problem of this multi-lingual continent. So I suggested that our Encyclopaedia Asiana could easily be printed in simple Roman typography, with occasional insertion of rare technical terms in the three major scripts of Asia—Sanskrit, Chinese and Arabic covering more than half of humanity. Things are now in an uncertain condition in China otherwise our Chinese colleagues (whom I saw publishing the big Webster Dictionary in Chinese), would have come forward to help us in the matter.

Progress in Printing

Now Turkey, with its well developed press and printing houses can easily co-operate with India in printing 40/50 Volumes of the Encyclopaedia Asiana. For finances the publishing corporation would naturally depend on subsidies from the progressive States of Asia and also from non-official sources and individual donors. The French Academy justified its title by completing the first French Encyclopaedic Dictionary, compiled by 40 Immortals within 40 years of its foundation in 1636. Now in 1951—with the turning of corner of the second half of the 20th century—we too have established in India, our National Academy of languages and literature and of drama and music. We Indians therefore should come forward to prepare the ground for the publication of the first Asian Encyclopaedia which would be the emblem and exemplar of the cultural freedom and hegemony of Asia,—this cradle of mankind and the mother of the major religions of mankind.

Istanbul is the centre of scientific studies of the Turkish State as I realized after visiting its grand Technical university (founded in 1883), where some Professors eagerly enquired about our recent publications on Hindu Astronomy, Indian Medicine and other subjects. Istanbul University carried the confluence of cultures of the East and the grand traditions of the West.

FREEDOM CONVERTED INTO INDISCIPLINE

A student gathering had the following piece of advice given them by the Indian Premier Nehru at Gwalior.

"You should not become a kind of compressed encyclopaedia of all facts, but raise your intellectual standard in such a manner that you can discharge your responsibilities efficiently."

The student world was moving in a peculiar and a wrong direction. The student class had misinterpreted the principles of the Indian freedom movement and had converted it into indiscipline. To-day the relationship between students and teachers was like that between employee and employer. The students believed in strikes, lock-outs and acted in an indisciplined way, which was not fair as such actions were quite different from the basic principles of the freedom movement. Such actions could have been justified during the British rule when we had to fight for our freedom. But those conditions had now completely changed.

The students who were now studying in the universities were to shoulder great responsibilities in the years to come. Not every one of them could become first-rate intellectuals, but a majority of them should possess a high average of intellect, otherwise the nation would become a second-rate one.

"More and more do I emphasise the development of the quality of men and women which indeed is a tremendous task," he said. This has got to be done if India is to become a first rate nation.

Mr. Nehru said a high average of intellect and a high sense of discipline were the two great qualities in Britishers and they were able to tide over times of adversity by acting in a disciplined and systematic manner. They did not raise mere slogans, but worked hard. People in India thought that by shouting slogans, they could become political leaders. Perhaps they did not know that a politician had to deal with human beings which was altogether a different problem and could certainly not be solved by raising slogans.

Giant General Election

Only 23,00,000 Ballot Boxes

The statewide allocation of the 2½ million ballot boxes ordered for the General Elections in India will certainly stagger the reader.

Assam	50,000
Bihar	2,40,000
Bombay	1,80,000
Madhya Pradesh	1,31,000
Madras	3,90,000
Orissa	1,00,000
Punjab	75,000
Uttar Pradesh	4,50,000
West Bengal	1,65,650
Hyderabad	1,00,000
Madhya Bharat	50,016
Mysore	58,000
Pepsu	21,500
Rajasthan	8,000
Saurashtra	16,000
Travancore-Cochin	60,000

It is learnt that even 23,00,000 ballot boxes may not suffice as already several States are understood to have asked for more ballot boxes.

Preliminary Observations On Proposed Bill

ment might be put off, or if it is introduced, the Government spokesmen could make it clear that the Government at this stage is not necessarily wedded to the Bill in its present form and that it is prepared to accept amendments or even consider the matter as a whole, whichever course is just and more constitutional. The desirability of consideration by Parliament after the next General Election also need not be ruled out.

IX

What is temporarily expedient may not be expedient in the long run, if expediency in politics is at times to be considered the deciding factor.

X

"A political thinker from Canada, a country noted for the development of its democratic institutions and for the attainment by its people of a fair degree of material prosperity and for its intense fervour for the preservation of its cultural traditions and its religious faith gave expression recently to certain thoughts on the democratic way of life. He says:—

(a) The function of Government is not to manage the good life but rather to clear away obstacles in the way of it.

Religion, philosophy, science, are the huge areas of activity in the search for the good, the true, and the beautiful, and are outside Government as much but are deeply related to the very essence, inspiration, and end of democracy."

(b) "Each generation is a trustee for the next. Whatever it does, either helps or compromises the next."

We are not to be impatient. Five, ten, or even fifteen thousand years of history is not a long time compared with the millions of years of antecedent groping."

XI

The Tamils were among the earliest to ask for the establishment of democratic institutions and the introduction of the elective principle in Ceylon. The Jaffna Association (along with the Chillaw Association) many decades ago pressed for these requirements; and now their requests have been granted and Ceylon has regained the substance of National Independence. It is fit and proper for the Tamils to continue that respect for Parliamentary institutions and Parliamentarians. It is equally desirable for Parliament and Parliamentarians to conduct national affairs in such a manner as to command the allegiance and support of the people towards democratic institutions and personalities.

XII

It is common ground that Hindu Scriptures and seers have always emphasized the need for the proper preservation to temple properties and belongings and this ideal is part and parcel of our religion. Ideally there should not be much difficulty in finding some suitable method in achieving this religious ideal without the State infringing in any way on the domain of religion.
