SOUTH INDIAN PEOPLE'S ASSOCIATION.

A new organisation with the above A new organisation with the above name has come into existence in South India. Its object is to promote the interests of non-Brahmin Indians as against the predominating influence and aggrandising powers of the Brahmin community in this part of India. Although it has been long known to those who have some acquaintance with Indian affairs that the Brahmins of South India are a most influential body, yet the Manefesto issued by this Association discloses many facts which have not been generally known before. Not less the 40, out of 41½ millions, who form the population of the Madras Presidency, are non-Brahmins, and the bulk of the tax-payers, including a large majority of the zemindars, lard-holders and agriculturiste, also belong to and the bulk of the tax-payers, including a large majority of the zemindars, lard-holders and agriculturiste, also belong to the same class. But the Brahmins almost monopolise the public services, seats in the Legislative and Municipal Councils, and generally all offices of evmoluments and honour in the Presidency. Some timese given are every interesting, if not and honour in the Presidency. Some tigures given are evry interesting, if not startling. In the competitive Examinations for the Provincial Civil Service which were held between 1892 and 1904, out of 16 successful endidates 15 were Brahmins. In the competition for appointment of Assistant Engineers in Madras, the number of successful candidates, during the same period, was 17 Brahmins, and 4 non-Brahmins. Out of 140 Deputy Collectors 77 were Brahmins and 30 non-Brahmin Hindus, the rest being Mahomedans, Indian Christians, Europeans and Anglo-Indians. It is also worthy of notice even where competitive being Mahomedans, Indian Christians, Europeans and Anglo-Indians. It is also worthy of notice even where competitive Examinations did not exist, as for instance in the Subordinate Judicial Service of the Presidency, the major portion of the appointments was in the hands of the Brahmins. Out of 128 permanent District Munsiffs in 1913, 93 were Brahmins and 25 only were non-Brahmin Hindus. Since the Executive Council of His Excellency the Governor of Madras has been opened to Indians, three Indian gentlemen have been admitted into it in succession, the two latter being Brahmin lawyers. Of the five Indian Judges at present of the High Court of Madras, four of them are Brahmins, while the other is a Mahomedan. In 1914 a new Secretaryship to Government was created, and a Brahmin official was forthwith apapointed to it. The Indian Secretary to the Board of Revenue is a Brahmin, and of the two Collectorships open to the Members of the Provincial Civil Service that which has fallen to the share of communities other than Mahommedans has nearly always gone to Brahmins.

It is also pointed out that what is true of Government Service is equally true of munities other than Mahommedans has nearly always gone to Brahmins.

It is also pointed out that what is true of Government Service is equally true of local and other public bodies. Where an electorate is composed of a large number of Brahmins, the non-Brahmin Indian has hardly a chance. It nearly always happens that while the non-Brahmins do not concentrate upon a single candidate, Brahmin or non-Brahmin, the Brahmins pearly always unite and aupport their castemas. The Madras University of which the majority of Indian Fellows are Brahmins, has never returned a non-Brahmin Indian to the local Legislative Council, so much so that no non-Brahmin Indian, however well qualified otherwise, indulges in the hope of getting elected as Mamber for the University in the Legislative Council, unless it be with the support of the European fellows. The total number of registered Graduates of the University in 1914 was 650, of whem 452 were Brahmins, 124 non Brahmin Hindus and 74 belonged to other communities. Since 1907 when election of fellows by registered Graduates began, 12 fellows were elected of whom with one exception were elected of whom with one exception all were Brahmins. In the election of the Imperial Legislative Councils and to Municipal bodies one finds the same truth illustrated, so far as the elections could be controlled by this "rigidly exclusive caste." If occasionally a fairminded ruler endeavours to correct the inequality arising from the preponderance of Brahmins on any public body, by having recourse to nominations of individuals from comparitatively unrepresented interests, he is severely criticised in the Brahmin press.

ing recourse to nominations of individuals from comparitatively unrepresented interests, he is severely criticised in the Brahmin press.

These are the reasons which prompted several leading non-Brahmin Hindus of South India to organise this Association, to advance, safeguard and protect the interests of the community. In accordance with this object a Joint Stock Company has been started for conducting a daily newspaper in English, Tamil and Teliugu respectively and the political organisation above referred to also has been formed. These are undoubtedly moves in the right direction. But non-Brahmin Hindus should, if they are serious in attaining their object, adopt more effective measures to promote in their communities in regard to University qualifications. In every English School and College in South India 90 per cent of the boys are Brahmins. It is in this proportion they also hold offices of emoluments and honour in the country. We think the present awakening among the non-Brahmin Hindus will have the effect of advancing them to a position in some measure equal to their numerical importance. The Brahmins, although they are not to blame for occupying the unique position which they hold among Indians, have yet to avoid dissension in the Hindu community, by being less selfish and exclusive. Although Brahmin influence in public offices and public bodies is something remarkable and is generally employed for the aggrandisement of their community, yet non-Brahmins if they are equally equipped and qualified are sure to make headway everywhere and the present inequality will be a thing of the past. A non Brahmin Hindu of South India, the Hon'ble Sir Sankara Nair, is now holding the highest official appointment in India, open to an Indian, as Education Member of the Viceroy's Exenow holding the highest official appointment in India, open to an Indian, as Education Member of the Viceroy's Executive Council.

In Ceylon the Burghers, till some years past, occupied the position which the Brahmins hold in South India. But now, though they deservedly hold eminent positions in the public service, yet the Sinhalese and Tamils have gradually secured their share of public offices and there is no longer the complaint of Burgher monopoly and exclusiveness, such as gher monopoly and exclusiveness such as we now hear of Brahmin monopoly of Brahmin monopoly of offices in South India.

NOTES & COMMENTS.

Scarcely had we finished writing our leader on the Madras Co-operative Conference published THE SOCIAL SERVICE in our last issue, LEAGUE, COLOMBO. when our eyes were caugh tby the last quarterly report of work done by the Social Service League, Colombo, appearing in the columns of our daily contemporaries. The coincidence is, to us, very significant. Almost precisely the same things are being done by the Indians and the Ceylonese with two different watchwords called 'Co-operation' and 'Social Service'. Of course, deeds and not names matter very much in the eyes of intelliwords called 'Co-operation' and 'Social Service'. Of course, deeds and not names matter very much in the eyes of intelligent people, and the deeds of the League gent people, and the deeds of the League so far reported give promise of still brighter achievements in the service of those who are in sad need of it. It is with very great pleasure, therefore, that we congratulate the League on the very good work it has been doing all along in many directions. We said we congratulate the League with pleasure. But when we truly analyse the surging emotions that are swaving our heart at prewhen we truly analyse the surging emotions that are swaying our heart at present, they are truly most painful. Would to God that the evils in the form of poverty, of disease, of suffering, of ignorance and of vice which the noble band of Social Service workers are trying to remedy were never there in Society at all. But however much we may wish the contrary, fasts are stubborn and too much praise caunot be bestowed on those who are heroically and strenuously battling with some of the ugly ones. Of course, gentlemen connected with the League do not care so much for personal praise as for the active support of those who may be in a position to help them. That this help will indeed be forthcoming, we do not do not care with the support of those who may be in a position to help them. That this help will indeed be forthcoming, we do not care with the support of those who may be in a position to help them.

INDO-CEYLON RAILWAY DISPUTE —At the ordinary general meeting of the S I. Railway Company held on the 15th November at Westminster, Sir Henry Kimber, Bart. (the Chairman) presided. With regard to the Indo-Ceylon connection, Sir Henry remarked that the Railway Board of India had offered to intervene in a friendly way with a view to the settlement of the differences between the Company and the Ceylon Government. Arrangements had been made for the President of the Railway Board to meet the Company's Agent and the Ceylon authorities at the end of last September with a view to arriving, if possible, at a friendly settleto arriving, if possible, at a friendly settlement of the differences which existed between the Ceylon Government and the Company, but the unfortunate illness of the Governor of Ceylon caused the postponement of the meeting, and it was not now known when it would be held.

the meeting, and it was not now known when it would be held.

The Hindu Conference.—Lucknow, December 28.—The most important feature of the Christmas week at Lucknow was the session of the Alt-India Hindu Conference and it would not be an exaggeration to say that next to the Congress, the Hindu Conference was the most successful assemblage and did most useful work. For the Hinduc, the Conference at Lucknow for the first time asserted its political character and gave a notice to the Congresswalas that henceforward, the great Hindu nation has resolved to voice forth its view itself and protect its interest directly and no longer shall leave it in the indifferent hands of their so-called (with few honourable exceptions) representatives in the Congress. There was great enthusiasm throughout and every one seemed to be interested to a degree not usual to Hindu tempersment. The vigour and energy displayed were remarkable. The Hintu public may be congratulated on the new life awaketed in the country under the wise guidance and leadership of Diwan V. P. Madhavarao, c. i. INDIA'S INCLUSION. BRITISH PRESS VIEWS

Entrish Press views.

London, Dec. 27.—The Times says:—India is to be given a place in the Conference to which her enthusiastic and devoted support of the Imperial cause in the War entitles her. The extension of the invitation to India suggests that Government do not anticipate any objection from the Dominions. India, indeed, has buttressed a claim already very strong by the splendour of her devotion to the Imperial tie in the time of War. The Government now show that they recognise her desire, and strongly sympathise with her legitimate moderate aspirations.

in War.

The Daily Chronicls says:—It is right and proper that India should be represented at the Imperial War Conference, for her interests are mained peaceable and loyal, and ber Ruling Chiefs and others have given many touching examples of devotion to the Empire.

The Daily News says:—The presence of representatives of India beside the Premiers of the Dominions will mark the opening of a new epoch. It will be a protound disappointment if it is not decided that at least one of the spokesmen from India shall be an Indian.

THE INDIAN NATIONAL CONGRESS.

ATTENDED BY SIR JAMES AND LADY MESTON. Calcutta, Dec. 29th.

Calcutta, Dec. 29th.

Lucknow, Dec. 28th.—The Lieut. Governor and Lady Meston attended the Congress today and received a hearty reception, the President welcoming them in a cordial speech. In reply, Sir James Mecton referred to the fact that the first meeting was in 1885, the year of his arrival in India, giving him 31 years, a unique opportunity of watching the development of a great movement which he had watched with interest and deep sympathy. It was, therefore, a great pleasure to him to be for the first time the guest and visitor at that great meeting. He thanked them from the bottom of his heat.

His Honour left after a resolution for the re-peal of the Arms Act had been moved in a speech by Mrs. Sarojini Naidu.

The attendance today was larger than on the ning day owing to the presence of Mohamedans in consequence of the unanimous agreement of a joint conference last night for 30 per cent. Moslem representation in U. P.; also that if in any province two-thirds of the community against any measure both communities would withhold support.

A large number of resolutions were passed te-day dealing with the repeal of the Press and Arms Acts, volunteering, commissions in the army and the treatment of Indians in the Colonies .- The Times of Ceylon, Dec. 29.

THE PHYSICAL MENTAL, AND MORAL EDUCATION OF YOUNG CHILDREN.

"I have gotten a man form the Lord" said Eve in surprise and delight when she saw her firstborn. So every mother sees in her baby the future man or woman, as well as the little creature to live and chorish at the moment. He has in him great possibilities. We can so care for him that they may be realised. We can so neglect care that he never has a chance. How shall we do the best we can and neglect nothing that it is in our power to give? By taking thought, by having an open mind and seeing eyes, and not by believing that knowledge comes by instinct. For, under queer conditions in which we live, it does not.

If we plant a bulb, which has in it tiny leaves and flowers undeveloped read-If we plant a bulb, which has in it tiny leaves and flowers undeveloped, ready to grow into beauty, they will not so grow unless the bulb has soil with proper food in it—and not too much of that—sunlight, air, and warmth. Given these conditions, you need only plant the bulb and water it, and the flowers and leaves will grow of themselves. If you leave out any one thing the plant will be imperfect. It is the same with a child. Give his body and his faculties what they need and he will grow. Deny him whathe needs and he cannot flourish.

PHYSICAL EDUCATION.

Physical Education.

Physical Education.

The new baby needs two things: warmth and food—given not too often and not too seldom. Then he immediately starts to grow. Quits soon he needs sufficient fresh air to renew nis blood and above all he needs sunlight as soon as his eyes are strong enough to bear it. Fresh air he can get best by being put to sleep, warmly wrapped up and with a hot bottle, out of doors or in a room with the window open.

When a baby gets used to life so that his lungs and heart and digestion work regularly and well, he begins to need freedom for exercise so that his muscles may grow. He must not be so closely wrapped up, when awake, that he cannot move his limbs. We usually leave the baby unwrapped before the fire several times a day, or in his cot if the room is warm. But the time a baby takes most exercise is in his bath, when he has freedom from clothes and yet feels safe and warm. That is why he enjoys his bath so tremendously, he feels he can move his limbs, uncertainly and aimlessly, but move them he can and does. From the bagioning it is important so to clothe a child that he has complete freedom of movement and is kept warm. The best clothes when the baby is shortened are: Knitted woollen jacket or vest with sleeves, knitted drawers, and a woollen frock with sleeves, knitted drawers, and a woollen frock with sleeves. Later on, over the knitted things, a simple home-made woollen jersey and knickerbockers buttoned on. I should dress little boys and girls alike. Many children have cotton grawlers over all, which are assily washed.

When a baby is old enough it is a good plan to not the floor or a mattress near the fire.

when a baby is old enough it is a good plan to put him on the floor or a mattress near the fire. That is, on a flat surface where he can kick and throw his arms about and roll. You will see him begin to move his arms to and fro, and sometimes he will hit something, and that interests him, and then he will wave again, and graduelly he will learn control of his muscles so that he can touch something within his reach if he wants to. And as presently he will clutch and grasp a small thing, and then he works and works his back till he can roll over and at last crawl. All the time his muscles are getting exercise and growing, and he must have as much freedom as possible. A good way to keep a little child in the room is to make a slot on each side of the doorway by naling up a couple of strips of wood and slip in a board eighteen inches high. An adult can easily step over this, and a child cannot get out.

If we give a child the conditions he needs for growth, grow he will, but that is not education. To educate is to choose what you do for him in each and eyen, and that he shall sensing well and not be ill. And you must also choose to withhold things which are harmful, such as comforters, tight clothes, and unwholesome food. The most important thing about physical education is regularity; meals, washing, sleep at regular intervals. A little child needs much sleep, and when he is old enough to run about he should be put to bed after dinner and allowed to sleep, and when he is old enough to run about he should be put to bed after dinner and allowed to sleep, and when he is old enough to run about he should be put to bed at 12.80, he may sleep till 3, and is put to bed at 12.80, he may sleep till 3, and then if at all possible he should go out. A sandheap and a few little toys in the yard will occupy him safely till tea time if the weather is not too cold. But if he is well clothed a child will keep himself warm for a good time by moving about. He must have warm, dry socks and knickers when he comes in, and if you begin to put him to bed at six after his tea, he will sleep all night and be out of the way all evening, a great convenience.

Too much stress cannot be laid on the regularity of meals and sleep. A child up to three years old needs at least fourteen hours of sleep in the twentyfour. Now this regularity, is education. The machinery of the little body becomes accustomed to work and to rest at certain hours. The stomach will digest, the bowels will be moved, the stomach will rest—and so again the same every day. At the beginning it is very troublesome to induce cleanliness by regularity, but it can be done, and the care amply repays itself. Even the smallest baby prefers not to wet his naplins, let alone soil them. He must be taught from the beginning to tell by gunning. A child of six months can be and often is absolutely clean in his habits in the day time, and at night he must be taken up when the mother goes to bed.

Education of the body is to induce good habits, and such adveation begins at birth. As the day follows the night and the night the day, so should food, rest, exercise regularly alternate in a child's life in a kind of pattern. The pattern has to vary as the child grows from month to month at first; afterwards at much longer intervals, but after the child begins freely to run about and talk the pattern should vary hardly at all till be is of school age. Everyday he should sleep after dinner and every evening he should go to bed at six or soon after.

MENTAL EDUCATION.

After.

MENTAL EDUCATION.

The child's mind grows with his body, and as the one needs right conditions, so does the other, or it will be stunted. The mind is developed through the senses. A new-bern baby knows nothing, but he has eyes and ears, he can taste and smell and feel. Through the senses he begins to understand the world round about him. First he will distinguish light from darkness, then moving objects. He hears sounds and soon knows the difference between a pleasant voice and a scolding one. His taste and smell are not acute at first, but his sense of touch is, and through this sense of touch he comes in contact with the objects round about him. When he is moving his arms and touches something, he likes that, and waves again, and he will go on doing it, often for a long time, exercising his nuceles and learning something about distance at the same time. This learning about the properties of thing by touch sight, hearing and taste and smell is mental development.

How can we educate the mind? I am firmly convinced that if only we do not interfere we shall be doing the best we can. A baby has great power of concentration; he will look ateadily at one thing for a long time; he will make a movement over and over again until he can control it. He should be left undisturbed, he should not be speken to for the sake of seeing him smile. With in the regular limits of his time—his meals, sleep, going out—the baby should not be interrupted when he is absorbed. What goes on around him will always be sufficient to occupy him if he can see it. He should not be in a ect out of which he cannot see, when awake, unless it is his sleeping time.

It is part of mental education to accustom the child to occupy himself, not to require his mother's constant attention. He will be much happier so occupied, and much less trouble, but he will not think so if he finds that each time he cries he is taken up and amused. He must acquire the habit of self-occupation, and to this habit he must be helped. We all know how tiresome it is to be interrupted when we are very busy. Now a baby's mental business is to learn all he can about the world in which he lives, and he does not like to be interrupted while learning. Unless it is mealtime or bedtime a child should never be spoken to unnecessarily when it is absorbed and good. For this reason he should not be prevented from doing anything he can unless it is injurious to himself or others. We learn and grow by effort and achievement. One morning I say a child of two and a half came to breakfast. He had a whole series of delightful achievements before him: he would climb on to his high chair, he would unfold his feeder and painfully tie the tapes round his neck in front and then turn it round; then delight of delights, he would take a spoon and crack his egg. A grown up rushed at him, dumped him on to his chair, tied his feeder, and never noticing the child getting reder and redder, she broke his egg, and he broke into a howl of disappointment. Too often, out of mistaken kindness, do we thus thwart a child in his efforts and in his delight in attaining his end by himself.

Moral Education. It is part of mental education to accustom the

MORAL EDUCATION.

MORAL EDUCATION.

This has to do with control over ourselves. A baby can learn cootrol from the very beginning; good mental and physical habits lead to control. Not till he is thoroughly at home with his surroundings can he begin to have the least idea of right and wrong. Now regularity is more important than ever, because through good habits the child becomes accustomed to do right without having to make a painful choice. Think of the worry of having, each day, a struggle about going to bed, because the child knows that if he plagues his mother enough she will let him stay a little longer. So every night the same act is played, child and mother both getting put out. Neither should be put to this pain, a little firmness only its needed. If there is more any question about it, the child will go happily to bed as regularing a lookwork and will have established one notion of right, to do us he is told willingly and with good temper. The same with food. We all know that children of, say, five, will not touch unfamiliar foods. How important, therefore, to give them only the right food from the beginning, and so not only with the body, but with the unind. Let him hear only kind words and pleasant voices, and that to which he is accustomed will be to him right, the unaccustomed wrong. If he is never butten to do unreasonable things he will recognise that obedience to the reasonable actions required of him is right, and he will be more likely to reject wrong doing when it comes his way.

Some day a choice will be offered him, and he can only choose rightly if he is acquainted with right doing. And for him, while he is small, this acquaintance comes through good habits and trust in the kindness of those whom he knowbest. The very first time that he makes a good choice he shows control over his will, and to strengthen and direct this control for good is moral education.

The authorities of the strength of

The cultivation and exercise of good habits, physical, mental and moral, is the beginning and foundation of education.

HINDU-MOSLEM SETTLEMENT.

HINDU—MOSLEM SETTLEMENT.

No better commentary on the relations that exist between the principal communities in India as regards political aspirations can be found than the settlement arrived at at Lucknow last evening regarding separate Muslim representation, especially in the Indian legislature. It will be remembered that a prolonged and bitter controversy raged round the special representation clause in the United Provinces Municipalities Act between the Muslims and the Hindus and that it had not ceased till almost yesterday when a welcome settlement of the question was unanimously accepted by both the sides. The point at issue which the Joint Conference of the All-India Congress Committee and the All-India Muslim Leggue was called upon to decide was the percentage of Muslim representation in the Councils in Bengal and the United Provinces. The Muslim representations should be guaranteed to them and that in the United Provinces 38 per cent. of the members should be Muslims. This claim was necessarily deemed by Hindus too extravagant to be allowed without remonstrance; and, thanks to the good sense and spirit of conciliation that prevailed on both sides, an agreement was arrived at after some prolonged deliberation whereby the Muslims were allowed to have 40 per cent. of the seats in Bengal and 30 per cent. In the United Provinces. Many have recognised, none better than we, the sinister significance and the possible mischievous consequences of a system of special electorates; but what the Joint Conference had to do at Lucknow last evening was not to discuss the wisdom or otherwise of the system, but to hit upon a workable arrangement which would be acceptable to both the parties. This they have succeeded in doing—an evil course, undoubtedly, but one which, under the circumstances was not, perhaps, avoidable. This unity of interest, displayed not among Hindus and Muslems only, but among Christians as well, as we pointed out yesterday, not at the conference of a few leaders only, but at conferences in which had

The following is H. E. the Vicercy's reply:—

Gentlemen,—I thank you for the welcome you give to me and warmly appreciate the expressions of loyalty to the King Emperor and of the attachment to the Empire which find a place in your address. You deplore the anarchical crimes which have of recent years constituted such a blot upon the fair name of Bengal: I welcome that sentiment and gladly recognize that the heart of the great mass of the people is sound, but this cancerous growth exists and if it is only a passing state of things as you suggest, it is taking a good many years to pass. Nor can I see at present any visible symptoms of naturel decay. We have, I am thankful to say, been able seriously to check its progress, and this is largely due to the courage and skill of those members of the police service, who have had the unpleasant task of dealing with this particular form of crime. They are mainly your own countrymen and their galantry fills me with admiration and constitutes an example of which every Bengali may will be proud. In the interests of the Peace and quist of India it has been necessary to deprive a number of conspirators of their liberty, but you may feel sure that this action has not been take no mere suspicion, but on a firm assurance of treir guilty participation. Your Governor, His Excellency Lord Carmichael, has personally investigated each case and in those rays acase which have come to me I have always myself examined the papers with great care.

I am here in India on behalf of His Majesty to do all that hies in my power to forward the peace, prosperity and happiness of this country, and to me, it any rate, it is clear that steady progress along the path of political development is one of the roads along which the happiness of India lies. But you may take it as cortain that the prevalence of anarchical crime will not be regarded as a ground for political progress. On the contwary that task of the Government is beset with the multy so long as those who wiseld power. Home can point to this festering sort, four Governor who have seemed a high made in your esteem and in whose mission I have from an acquaintance of the most of the serious confidence. has pointed out to you clearly the serious cases of this avil. You speak with confidence of the approaching end of the terrible struggle in which the Allies are now engaged; but though the end is certain the conflict is still bound to be long and deadly. Our enemy is in desperate straits, but his spirit is not yet broken and till it is, we cannot hope to secure guarantee for the future freedom and peace of the world. We cannot yet afford to telk about peace, but these precocupations do not and will not prevent the Government of India from giving their earnest attention to the problems of this great Empire. The growing self-respect and self-conciousness of her people are plants that we ourselves have watered and—if the blossom is not always what we expect, it is not for us to blame the plant. There are doubtless some of you who think our footsieps halting and our progress slow. But I should be dishonest if I held out any hope that progress will be rapid. Neither the British constitution nor the British temperament is fond of catastrophic changes. Nor are such changes consistent with development on sound and healthy lines. Progress should be steady and sure and in regard to if I believe that my views are in close harmony with those of my predecessor, who was as happy as to win the confidence of India, and using Local Hardinge's words "I hope some days to see India hold a position of equality amongst the rister nations of which the British Empire is compessed." In this respect, gentlemen, I earnestly invite your cooperation. ### CONTROL OF CHURCH PROPERTY.

There has been some little delay in replying to There has been some inside delay in replying to Mr. Nathan's letter published in the "Morning Star of the 20th December, 1916, because I have had to wait for a temporarily absent lawyer friend of mine to whom I have been indabted for the statement that there are laws controlling Christian Church Property.

Christian Church Property.

So far as Mr. Nathan is concerned, his sentence, "I believe in suspicion which" according to him, of course, "is in fact the first step to the exposure of crime" puts an end to all further controversy with him. For it betrays an attitude of mind in him which is absolutely irreconcilable with mine which will never permit me to rush to print on mere suspicion unsupported by full and unshakable evidence. And therefore my controversy with him is closed, though in design it I cannot help remarking that his view that even "full proof" will not exempt him from conviction in a court of law, reflects very badly either on the laws of the land or on all the judges administering them. Now, I bid good bye to Mr. Nathan.

Now let me turn to the "Morning Star's" feditorial remark that my statement that "laws exist controlling Christian Church property" is "abso-lutely" false,

I have a big volume before me entitled, "The Laws of England by the Right Honourable The Earl of Halsbury, Lord High Chancellor of Great Britain, and other Lawyers."

The Ecclesiastical Law of England is deal' with in pages 849-829 of the Eleventh Volume. Part VI deals with the 'Property of the Church of England'; and Part VII deals with 'Religious Bodies other than the Church of England.

There is a section in page 809 dealing with the "Property of the Roman Catholic Church; there is another in page 819 dealing with the "Church Property" of Protestant Non-conformists.

The words printed in big characters in page 318 are also significant. Page 348 has, "Easter Offerings; see Feelesiastical Law. Ecclesiastical oharities, see Ecclesiastical Law. Ecclesiastical corporations; Ecclesiastical Taw."

London, Dec. 28.

General Haig reports:—We searched and bombed a few hundred yards of trenches and dugouts North-Westward of Lens, greatly damaging them. We had no casualties. Our position Northward of the Somme and near Le Sare was heavily shelled at intervals. We successfully bombarded defences and trench mortar emplacements in the neighbourhood of Hulluch and Westward of Mesines. A number of air fights took place. An enemy aeroplans was destroyed and five damaged. Three of ours are missing.

London, Dec. 29.

General Sir D. Haig says:—Of three enemy parties attempting to raid North Westward of Gommecourt two were driven back by our fire. The third reached the trenches and the enemy were immediately ejected. The enemy at night-time fired many gas shells in places behind the Front line in the neighbourhoods of Arras and Lens. There were a number of air-fights. Three hostile machines were destroyed and three others driven down damaged.

ITS EFFECT ON AMERICA.

London, Dec. 27.

Germany's latest move is regarded as another adroit attempt to rush the Allies into a so-called Peace Conference at any cost, with the object of jockeying them into a false position in the eyes of Noutrals; but yesterday night's bomb-shell is unlikely to have the desired effect on America, since Germany, which has persistently refused to reveal her Peace terms, ignores President Wilson's appeal to both sides to place their cards on the table. Moreover Germany has violated all diplom tic courtesies by allowing the publication of the Note in Berlin before its receipt at Washington. President Wilson receiving the first ne. London, Dec. 28.

The Daily Telegraph says the and of the Allies' reply so Garmany, approved by all the Allies, will make it clear that belligerents and Neutrals alike hope that no need is entertained of ever persuading the Allies to surrender their potential victory for the sake of a Peace which will be only a German Peace, so long as German Militariam is unbroken.

GENERAL HAIG ON THE SOMME OFFENSIVE.

London, Dec. 29.

In a despatch of about 10,000 words, dated 23rd instant, General Halg deals with the "bare outline of the importance of occurrences," and the part the British took in the battle of the Somme, one of the greatest, if not the greatest of the struggles that have ever taken place."

He having he walking why the offensive was

He begins by explaining why the offensive was so long delayed, namely, because of the necessity of great numbers of men and munitions, also the fact that a large proportion of the officers and men were far from being fully trained. For these reasons the longer it was delayed, the better but it was evident from the German attack on Verdun and the Austrian offensive in the Trentino the "atrain might become too great to be borne unless timely relief and action were taken."

STUPENDOUS PREPARATION.

He mentions the stupendous proparations made, including the accumulation of vast stores of all kinds near the front, construction of new railways of different gauges, gun-emplacements, trench tramways, dug-outs for ammunition, food and water, engineering material, scores of miles of deep communication trenches; also numerous borings for wells were sunk and 120 miles of watermains were laid.

General Haig defines the three-fold object of the offensive. First, to relieve Verdun; second, to assist the Allies in other theatres by stopping the further transfer of enemy troops from the West and third, to wear down the strength of the enemy.

THE OPERATIONS.

He then describes the actual operations, necessarily covering a good deal of ground of previous briefer despatches. He emphasizes three main phases of the battle. First, "considerable confusion and disorganisation in the enemy's ranks" caused by our attacks beginning in July; second, the operations from 14th July to 17th July, which gave us the command of the Southern crest of the main plateau between Delville Wood and Bazentin-le-Petit with the subsequent prolonged struggle for mastery, "in which, though progress was slow and difficult, the confidence of the men in their ability to win was never shaken. By the 1st of October, they established a fighting superiority which has left its mark on the enemy," and third, the phase in which we pushed down lower of the ridge and extended our flanks from Morva to Thiepval.

General Haig claims that all three objectives to Thiepval.

General Haig claims that all three objectives of the battle have been achieved. "Any one of these results itself has justified the battle of the Somme and the attainment of all three amply compensates our sacrides and shose of the Allies and is bringing us a long way towards the final victory." He says the fact that the strength of the enemy in November on the Western Front was greater than July, despite the abandonment of the Verdun offensive, justifies the first two claims.

TER ENBET'S LOSSES.

Regarding the third he admits that any statement must depend to some degree on estimates, nevertheless, there is sufficient evidence to show that the enemy's undoubted losses in men and material were considerably higher than the Allies', while morally our advantage was greater. Four-fifths of the enemy divisions on the Western Front were thrown successively into the battle, some twice, some thrice. Undoubtedly towards the end of the operations the enemy's power of resistance very seriously diminished. These results, by troops, a vast majority of whom were raised and trained during the War, constitute a feat of which the history of our nation contains no equal. no equal.

Examt not the Broken.

General Haig eencludes:—"The power of the enemy is not yet breken, nor is it possible to estimate the period that will clapse before the objects the Allies are fighting for are attained; but the battle of the Somme has placed beyond doubt the ability of the Allies to gain those objects. The German Army is the mainstay of the Central Powers. Fully half of that army, despite all the advantages of the defensive, supported by very strong fortifications, has suffered defeat on the Somme. Neither the victors nor the vanquished will forget this; and though bad weather has given the enemy a respite, there undoubtedly will be many thousands in his ranks who will begin the new campaign with little confidence of their ability to reast our assaults."
