REMEMBERING THE GREAT REFORMER

Million Voices To Bear Mahatma's Message

My Father Do Not Rest! Violence Can Never Solve Problems

BY SAROJINI NAIDU

BY KHAN ABDUL GHAFAR KHAN

How can he die, who through his life and conduct and sacrifice, who through his love and courage and faith has taught the world that the spirit matters, not the flesh, that the spirit has the power greater than the powers of the combined armies of the earth, combined armies of the ages? He was small, frail, without money, without even the full complement of garment to cover his body, not owning even as much earth as might be held on the point of a needle, how was he so much stronger than the forces of violence, the might of empires and the grandeur of embattled forces in the world? Why was it that this little man, this tiny man, this man with a child's body, this man so ascetic, living on the verge of starvation by choice so as to move in harmony with the life of the poor, how was it that he exercised over the entire world, of those who revered him and those who hated him, such power as emperors could never wield?

It was because he did not care for applause; he did not care for censure. He only cared for the path of righteousness. He cared only for the ideals that he preached and practised. And in the midst of the most terrible disasters caused by violence and greed of men, when the abuse of the world was heaped up like dead leaves, dead flowers on battlefields, his faith never swerved in his ideal of non violence. He believed that though the whole world slaughter itself and the whole world's blood be shed, still his non violence would be the authentic foundation of the new civilisation of the world and he believed that he who seeks his life shall lose it and he who loses his life shall find it. His first fast in 1924 with which I was associated was for the cause of Hindu-Muslim unity. It had the sympathy of the entire nation. His last fast was also for the cause of Hindu-Muslim unity, but the whole nation was not with him in that fast. It had grown so divided, it had grown so bitter, it had grown so full of hate and suspicion, it had grown so untrue towards the tenets of the various creeds in this country that it was only a section of those who understood the Mahatma, who realised the meaning of that fast.

Are we not there, his heirs, his spiritual descendants, the legatees of his great ideals, successors of his great work? Are we not there, to implement that work and enhance it and enrich and make greater achievements by joint efforts than he could have made singly?

We are his living symbols. We are his soldiers. We are the carriers of his banner before an embattled world. Our banner is truth. Our shield is non-violence. Our sword is a sword of the spirit that conquers without blood. Let us borrow from him, why borrow he has handed it to us the radiance of his own personality, the glory of his own courage, the magnificent epic of his character! Shall we not follow in the foot-steps of our master?

Non-violence is love. Violence is hatred. Violence can never solve problems or bring peace to the world. Else there should have been peace after the First World War. Was there peace? No. Then came the Second World War. Did any peace follow in its wake? None at all. Violence is such a thing that after one act of violence, there will be another of even greater violence. Each of the wars was more fierce than the preceding one. The next war may well be the most destructive. One thing is clear; if the world wills it, there can be peace but only through non-violence. If not, there will be a war greater than any before in the history because of nuclear weapons and the world will be utterly destroyed.

What was Gandhi's contribution? First of all, he inculcated in Indians courage in place of cowardice, the courage to demand freedom. The biggest thing he did, however, not only for India, but for the whole world, was to teach a lesson of non-violence. It was through him freedom came. Gandhi's non-violence was not of the weak but of the brave. Whatever evil happened was not because the people had not fully imbibed or assimilated it.

He did so much for the country and the people, in their service he bore so much hardship, sorrow and sufferings. But his place is assured and secure. We cannot enhance his status through praise nor can we lower

For Training in West Germany

Four officers attached to State Corporations went by air to West Germany on September 29th, on engineering scholarships awarded by the Government of the Federal Republic of Germany.

They are Mr. D. D. S. Peiris of the State Hardware Corporations and Messrs. V. Ponnampalam, G. J. C. Tissera and W.G. Soysa of the Ceylon Ceramics Corporation.

Messrs. V. Satchchithanandan and P. Jayasunderam of the Eastern Paper Mills Corporation are expected to go to Germany in February next year, also on engineering scholarships.

him in the estimation of the world through criticism. He was and will be what he has always been—great.

One day when he talked of violence I told Gandhi: How spirited by you give education to people in non-violence. There were rich people to give you ample financial assistance. In spite of this, there was plenty of violence in most part of India. In our Province, we have rich people too. They would give one enough to eat, but for the country and the people they would not spend even a pie.

'Again, we have plenty of the instruments of violence—which you do not have. Still we have had no violence in the Frontier while you have had plenty here. How did this happen?'

Gandhiji laughed at my question. "People say", he replied, "that non-violence is for cowards. But it is in fact for the brave. There was no violence in the Frontier because you people are brave."

In my own disposition there is little inclination for argument and debate. I have always been of the view that we must talk less and do more. There

FAST TO FREE WORLD FROM DRINK

Converting man from criminal tendencies and corrupt practice to noble inclinations and correct conduct was the essence of Mahatma Gandhi's conception of civic consciousness. In the year of the centenary of the outstanding teetotaler patriot of our generation, no tribute to the true Satyagrahi would be more real than service in the cause of total prohibition.

The turmoil in which humanity has found itself has been the direct result of the rule of demon DRINK. All the crimes that are being committed every hour all over the world can be traced to ALCOHOL. Of what avail will freedom from foreign yoke be if those freed have not been liberated from the ghostly grip of INTOXICATION? Root out the root of crime and the world will definitely improve.

Mahatma strived strenuously and steadfastly for making 'morality' the symbol of serene culture. Man to be morally mighty must be a total prohibitionist. Gandhi never preached anything that he did not practise. He exhorted the people to be free from the evil habit of drinking and he was peerless among the prohibitionists.

Fasting was a winning weapon in the armoury of the non-violent leader. But he was aware of the various developments that would result from 'Fasting' and therefore restricted its use only to the true Satyagrahi. If there be any true Satyagrahi today let him or her perform 'fasting' to free man from the frenzy of Alcohol.

VIOLENCE CAN...

was thus seldom any lengthy discussion or controversy between Gandhiji and me. For there was no difference in our approach or in our view points. Love of service was common to us both. We looked at all things from the same angle.

Once it so happened that the Bhangi in Wardha threw up his job and ran away. When this was reported to Gandhiji, he said: "Well, let us go with broom and bucket and clean up the place." And we went and attended to the sanitation.

When Gandhiji visited the Frontier Province in 1938 for the second time we had posted armed sentries where he was to rest for the night. This was purely a defensive measure. When Gandhiji saw this, he asked "Why these armed men?" "Babu". I told him, "they are here only to frighten away any intruders". But Gandhiji did not like. "I do not need them" he said, simply and firmly. The guns were taken away from the guards. The effect of this incident on our people was considerable. "Look at this strange man", they said, "His trust in God is such that he needs no arms."

There was a great deal of violence at first in the Frontier Province. Non-violence came later. The wave of violence led to such severe British repression that even brave people turned into cowards. But when non-violence came, even the cowardly Pathans turned brave. Before that the Pathans were so much afraid of soldiers and jails, that they had no courage to talk to sepoys. But non-violence taught them the necessary courage, bravery and brotherhood. Children used to go to jails smiling. So courageous were they that they faced the biggest people.

Our way of violence was quickly and effectively suppressed by the British but our non-violence could not be suppressed either by Britain or Pakistan.

I was taking food in a small village when the news came over the radio that Gandhiji had been assassinated. On hearing this, those who were with me and I stopped eating; we were so stunned. We could not eat at all after that. The news of Gandhiji's murder created a sense of shock in all—they felt that a true lover, helper and friend of theirs had left them.

Gandhiji's murder was a crime against God. To kill the man, who all his life gave up all, went to jail and suffered and served the country, was a terrible crime. Whatever India suffers must be a result of God's wrath at this wrong.

How best can we honour such a man? The people must be provided with the basic necessities of life which Gandhiji wanted them to have. If we take Gandhiji's philosophy to the villager he may well accost us saying 'I am hungry. First feed me. I am naked. Clothe me. My children are without a school. Give them one. I am ill and I have neither doctor nor medicine. Look after me.'

Therefore, I say, the best observance of Gandhiji's birth centenary would be to supply the people the basic necessities of life.

My Father.....

Shall we not, obey the mandates of our father? Shall not we his soldiers carry his battle to triumph? Shall we not give to the world the completed message of Mahatma Gandhi? Though his voice will not speak again, have we not a million, million voices to bear his message to the world, not only to this world, to our contemporaries, but to the world generation after generation? Shall sacrifice be in vain? Here and now, here and now. I for one be ore the world that listens to my quivering voice pledge myself and you, as I pledged myself more than 30 years ago, to the service of the unaying Mahatma.

What is death?...Mahatma Gandhi who lived for truth in this world has been translated though by the hand of an assassin, to a higher stage of the truth which he sought. Shall we not take up his place? Shall not our united strength be strong enough to preach and practise, his great message for the world?... Shall we not all take up his message and fulfil it?

My father, do not rest, Do not allow us to rest. Keep us to our pledge. Give us strength to fulfil
